

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

PREFACE

The present, which is the sixth, issue of the AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK is prevailingly biographical in character. From the first, no matter what line of investigation was pursued, the experience of the compilers has uniformly been that the Jews of the United States are unaware of the forces at their disposal. In no instance has this been more strikingly exemplified than in putting together the list of men and women prominent in the professions and in various walks of public life. It had to be gathered from catalogues, membership lists of societies, reference books, professional directories, and with the aid of individuals interested in special departments, to whom due acknowledgment of their valuable assistance is herewith gratefully made. In this way a list of over a thousand names was compiled, which it is not presumptuous to assume will introduce new acquaintances even to those most intimately conversant with Jewish affairs and conditions in the United States, and that in spite of its necessarily abridged form. Over nine hundred persons were addressed; for one reason or another 37 desired not to be included in the list; 42 were returned by the Post Office as incorrectly or inadequately addressed, and only 481 returned the information blanks filled out with their biographical data.

The other important feature of the present issue is the compilation made from the "Foreign Relations" documents on the passport question mooted between Russia and the United It is not hazardous to predict that this article, too, will be found to contain an element of novelty. Many Jews, especially the public-spirited ones who have concerned themselves with safeguarding the civil and religious rights of their co-religionists, are aware that our Government has been active in the matter, but few, if any, know of the extent of the negotiations, spread over a period of nearly forty years, that have been carried on between Russia and our Department of State. These negotiations have been unavailing, up to the present time, to secure from the Russian Government the recognition of the fundamental doctrine of the equality of American citizens, and of the serious objection of the United States to the exercise of inquisitorial rights, by Russian consuls, upon American soil. As a result of the Russian policy a diplomatic question, which in practice affected but a small percentage of our citizens, has now broadened into a national issue to whose solution both of the large political parties are pledged, and has led to the determination, on the part of our Government, that it will rest satisfied with nothing short of the universal inviolability of the American passport abroad.

It is hoped that the list of one hundred accessible books in English on Jewish subjects will prove useful to the various classes of persons interested in Jewish education. Acknowledgment is again due to the many who by their courteous co-operation make the Year Book as complete and trustworthy a record of Jewish activities in the United States as it is. In the measure in which their co-operation and the co-operation of still larger circles are assured will the Year Book grow completer and trustworthier.

is called 665 (הרסה) according to the short system (פֿלפֿי׳פֿ). It is a complete Leap Year of 13 months, 55 Sabbaths, 385 days, beginning on Saturday, the seventh day of the week, and having the first day of Passover on Thursday, the fifth day of the week; therefore its sign is השה. It is the third year of the 299th lunar cycle of 19 years, and the ninth year of the 203d solar cycle of 28 years, since the Creation.

BY CYRUS L. SULZBERGER

No startling tragedy marked the year 5664, and interest centred mainly in the political and diplomatic field. tirely bloodless no Jewish year can be. A reminder of Kishineff was given in the Gomel riots at the end of August, 1903; in the early part of September rioting in Galicia caused injury to a number of persons, and destruction to much property; in April Jews in Bulgaria were attacked on account of the blood-accusation, and Jews of Neustadt, East Prussia, were attacked and plundered; on May 1 five persons were killed in anti-Jewish riots in Bessarabia. Morocco, however, bears the malign supremacy for the year. In November, a hundred Jews fleeing from Taza reported that the Sultan's troops while occupying the town had massacred a number of Jews, violated the women and girls, and pillaged the shops. In December, in the city of Statt, an attack upon the Jews reduced 1500 to misery, and caused a property loss of 500,000 francs. Again in January a rioting mob attacked the Jewish quarter of the city of Morocco.

Less shocking, but more surprising by far, was the thunderbolt from the blue launched by Father Creagh in Limerick. Here the Jews had been residing in peace for twenty years, until last January, when this Roman Catholic priest made an onslaught upon them from the pulpit before a congregation numbering three thousand persons. The sole basis of the attack appeared to be that some of the Jews of Limerick are largely engaged in the sale of goods on the instalment plan, and the buyers frequently found it onerous to keep up their payments. This would hardly seem to warrant the indictment of an entire people, but it sufficed for Father Creagh. Here is an extract from the address as reported in the Limerick daily press: "Nowadays they dare not kidnap and slay Christian children, but they will not hesitate to expose them to a longer and even more cruel martyrdom by taking the clothes off their backs and the bit out of their mouths. Twenty years ago, and less, Jews were known only by name and evil repute in Limerick. They were sucking the blood of other nations, but these nations rose up and turned them out. And they came to our land to fasten themselves on us like leeches and to draw our blood when they had been forced away from other countries." This in the face of the testimony of the Limerick Daily Express that "as a race the Jews have, since persecutions in Russia have driven numbers of them to Ireland to find a home, proved themselves an eminently industrious and law-abiding section of the community."

In Western Europe, as in Eastern, the mob spirit is easier to arouse than to allay. Despite the "industrious and lawabiding" character of the Jews, the rabble attacked them on every hand, crying "Down with the Jews," "Death to the Jews." A general boycott against them was declared and carried on, and the entire community was said to be in danger. Michael Davitt promptly took up the matter in a letter to the Dublin Freeman's Journal, in which he denounced the outrage. The Roman Catholic Bishop promised his assistance to the extent of his powers, which, however, were limited because of Father Creagh's belonging to an independent order. John Redmond, M. P., leader of the Irish Parliamentary Party, disclaimed any sympathy with the attack, and the Irish Mission to the Jews at its annual meeting, held in Dublin, adopted resolutions of protest and denunciation, in the course of which the Jewish community of Ireland was declared to be "always sober, industrious, and law-abiding." On the other hand, the Limerick Confraternity of the Holy Family (a secret order numbering 6000) tendered Father Creagh their best thanks for his lecture, and expressed their fullest confidence in his views.

At about the date of this attack, there were renewed disturbances against the Jewish employees of the Steel Works at Dowlais, Wales. These events might be regarded as sporadic were it not that the testimony given before the Royal Commission on Alien Immigration, the report of that Commission, and the debate thereon, and on the East African Zionist project in the House of Commons, are all indicative of the existence of anti-Semitic feeling in Great Britain. It is quite true that in most cases the English anti-Semites lack the courage of their narrow-mindedness. The Commission, which was ostensibly inquiring into the general subject of immigration, was really concerned only with the Jewish phase of the subject, and its results, although not avowedly directed at the Jews, had in fact no other aim. The expressions in debate were in many cases most friendly to the Jews, though those giving utterance to them voted the other way. The Parliamentary discussion on the proposition to establish in East Africa an autonomous Jewish settlement under an English protectorate disclosed a similar condition. Mr. Burke is reported as saying in the House of Commons, on June 20, 1904, that he would be "the last to deny the immense contribution to civilization, science, and art for which we are indebted to the Hebrew race . . . . but it is against the public interest of this country to strengthen the forces of Judaism as against Christianity, or even, he would say boldly, as against paganism." On the other hand, at the same sitting, Mr. Lloyd-George stated that he saw no objection to the proposed Jewish settlement, one of his reasons for favoring it being that "there were a good many of the Jews we might spare."

More satisfactory conditions prevailed in the House of Representatives at Washington, where the continued efforts of Representative Henry M. Goldfogle to secure recognition of the American passport in the hands of a Jewish citizen not only called forth no discordant note, but had at least so much result that Francis Burton Harrison, of New York, and Alfred Lucking, of Detroit, Mich., made strong speeches in the House in support of the resolution, and both the Republican and Democratic parties in their national conventions included in their platforms outspoken utterances which should bear good fruit. Especially noteworthy in connection with this was the reference to the subject in the speech of Mr. John Sharp Williams, temporary chairman of the Democratic convention. An added instance of the "diplomacy of humanity" was the action of President Roosevelt when rumors of a contemplated renewal of rioting in Russia at the usual season disturbed the community. No one can know what might or might not have happened had the President remained inactive. However, it is certain that his prompt communication with our country's diplomatic representatives in Russia proved his thorough sympathy with our oppressed brethren there, as completely as did his acts a year ago in connection with the Kishineff petition.

No single phase of political activity has been of greater interest than the matter of immigration restriction in both America and England. At home, the subject was largely in the public eye. Many bills were introduced in Congress, all looking to more rigid enactments and aiming chiefly at illiterate and assisted immigrants. The chairman of the Senate Committee, Mr. Lodge, and the Commissioner of Immigration, Mr. Sargent, published their views in magazine articles and in public addresses, and the spokesmen of the Immigration Restriction League were active throughout the year. In the early summer, the steamship companies having reduced their rates for third-class passengers and the number of immigrants having increased, the administration at Ellis Island became more rigid in the examination of arrivals, and there was a considerably larger number of deportations on the ground of "likelihood to become public charges."

The Jewish immigration for the year will be the largest on record. Since 1884 the United Hebrew Charities of New York has kept statistics of the Jewish immigrants arriving at the port of that city. Prior to the present year the largest number arriving in any one year was 62,500 from October 1, 1890, to September 30, 1891. In the year 1902-1903, the number was 60,800, and for the current year the indications point to over 80,000. More than 69,000 arrived up to July 31, and the arrivals in the months of August and September are always numerous.

This greatly increased movement is directly traceable to Kishineff and Gomel, not so much because of the number coming from those cities as on account of the feelings of unrest and fear created by the disturbances there. It is interesting to observe that the immigration from Roumania is smaller, both in proportion to the whole and absolutely. Conditions there have been ameliorated to a considerable degree, and as the sense of danger in Russia has increased the movement, so that of peace in Roumania has decreased it. To us in America, dealing with a problem of the magnitude of ours, the perturbation of England over Alien Immigration-which is a British euphemism for Jewish immigration—is incomprehensible. According to the estimate of Mr. Joseph Jacobs for the Jewish Encyclopedia, the East End (alien) Jewish population of London is about 100,000, and the increase by immigration about 2500 per annum. When this is compared with the 11,509 who arrived at the port of New York in the single month of July, 1904, whereof 7804 remained in the city of New York, not alone is the contrast presented most striking, but it becomes difficult to understand the genesis of the Alien Immigration Bill, involving, as it does, a reversal of centuries of tradition. It is an inscrutable mystery that when this bill was up in Parliament, certain of the Jewish members could vote in its favor, when by reference to the conditions in New York they could have learned that a Jewish population nearly five times as large as London's, in a total population far smaller than that of London, was no menace to the city's well-being. On the contrary, the Jewish immigrants have added to the material prosperity of New York without making a drain, even fractionally proportionate to their numbers, upon either the charity budgets or the penal institutions. Yet, notwithstanding all this, and notwithstanding the opposition of men like

Sir Charles Dilke, Bryce, Trevelyan, and Asquith, when the bill was up on second reading, but three of the ten Jewish members of Parliament ranged themselves against the bill, and five abstained from voting. Never was public contempt more thoroughly earned. The bill has been abandoned for this year, and will probably never again be revived in the form in which it was introduced at this session of Parliament. In the agitation both in and out of Parliament, Major Evans-Gordon has been the most active restrictionist. His book, "The Alien Immigrant," and his magazine articles show the interest which the subject has for him, and although he visited Eastern Europe in order to study the matter at close range, and was convinced of the deplorable conditions under which the Jews are living, he nevertheless advocated the setting up of restrictions against their admission into England. narrowness of his view and its incompatibility with British traditions were admirably pointed out in a letter to him by Haham Gaster of London under date of May 4.

The Russian situation, probably because it has become chronic, has seemed less acute. There was no considerable bloodshed, much talk of amelioration, some action in that direction, and quite as much or more in the way of further restriction. What was given with one hand was frequently taken with the other, and if so vacillating a policy as was pursued can be characterized at all, it may best be described as one calculated to avoid arousing the active concern of the world. Whether as a result of the agitation and the representations following Kishineff, or on account of certain letters in the London Times, or because of the discovery that in the war with Japan public favor affords the only means by which financial requirements can be satisfied, the atrocities of former years have not been repeated, demonstrating by their absence in this crucial year that their occurrence at other times is due to governmental connivance or indifference. In fact, the Holy Synod issued a pronunciamento to the clergy instructing them that when a hostile attitude is taken toward the Jew, it is their duty to point out to their people that such attitude is wrong, and to endeavor by their sermons to correct it. At about the same time it was directed that Jewish exiles to Siberia be permitted in exceptional cases to have their wives and children follow them. Although this permission was granted only in special instances, it is evidently a concession, since it had formerly not been allowed at all to Jewish exiles. One is inclined to stop and wonder why the Government, being anxious to rid itself of as many Jews as possible and exiling to Siberia as many as it does,—it is said that 90 per cent of the political suspects arrested at Odessa are Jews,-does not send the families with the exiles, or, at all events, freely permit them to follow. In connection with this, an encouraging item of news comes in the month of July, 1904. Political crimes are no longer to be punished by administrative order, but only after conviction in court. How much this may mean, how real a trial in court may prove, it is, of course, impossible to say. It may well be that the proceedings in all political cases will be farcical, and yet it is an advantage to have such a trial rather than none at all. Not even Russia can forever withstand the ridicule of the world, and the form of judicial process once granted the substance must ultimately follow. What Russian law courts are, is clearly shown by the inadequate sentences imposed upon the Kishineff murderers, the treatment accorded the attorneys in the matter, and the fact that Danievsky, who assaulted Krushevan, the immediate instigator of Kishineff, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment and the loss of all civil rights.

The real responsibility for Kishineff was never so clearly disclosed as after the assassination of de Plehve in the latter part of July. Andrew D. White, formerly Ambassador of the United States to Russia, spoke of the late minister in these words: "His part in the horrible massacre and plunder of the Jews-men, women, and children-at Kishineff caused him to be regarded with abhorrence by the whole world." The London correspondent of the New York Sun said of him that "the world's greatest oppressor and Liberty's bitterest enemy died appropriately by an assassin's hand. That, in brief, is the view that monarchical Europe takes of the murder of M. de Plehve, the recent Minister of the Interior." The press of the civilized world agreed as to the execration in which his memory was held by right-minded men. Count Cassini, however, described de Plehve as "a man of the highest integrity and moral rectitude."

At Libau in September, 1903, the Czar received a deputation of Jews and accepted from them a gift of a Scroll of the Law. Unfortunately he seems unable to read Hebrew, for, within a few months thereafter, eighty Jewish families were expelled from Kieff, and a short time later, in February, 1904, according to the London Daily Express, the Government ordered the expulsion of Jewish residents from towns along the Trans-Siberian Railway with a degree of cruelty and barbarism almost incredible. They were not allowed to return by rail on the ground that the railroad was needed for the troops. From two to three thousand peoplemen, women, and children—were compelled to travel afoot a distance ranging from twelve hundred to two thousand miles with the temperature from twenty to forty degrees below zero, without shelter at night and with the Russian officials prohibited (if any such prohibition were required) from giving the travellers any facilities. Comment on this performance is superfluous.

In the line of concession was the opening of fifty-seven new places of settlement in the Pale, and as an offset a considerable restriction of existing rights of residence and trading outside the Pale, together with a more rigid enforcement of the law on this point. At the Demidoff Lyceum, where formerly Jewish students were admitted to the extent of 5 per cent, a limit of 3 per cent has been fixed. A striking illustration of Russian intelligence was the closing by the police of the Congress on Technical Education, because it protested against the anti-Semitic policy, and of the Russian Medical College, because it adopted resolutions setting forth the unsanitary results of the overcrowding of the Pale. London Times in December reported the result of a circular of inquiry issued by M. de Plehve, as Minister of the Interior, to the fifteen provinces in which Jews reside. space in the replies is devoted to the success or otherwise of the attempt to make Jewish farmers. The Governor of Podolia says it is a failure, while the opposite view is taken by the Governor of Minsk and the Governor of Ekaterinoslav. Most illuminating are the statistics supplied by the Governor of Cherson, a strong anti-Semite. According to these, 73 per cent of the Jewish population in his district were engaged exclusively in agricultural work, 19 per cent in agriculture in connection with some commercial pursuit, and 8 per cent in trade or industry. In both Ekaterinoslav and Cherson the Jewish Colonization Association in its annual report, submitted July, 1904, states that the insufficient amount of land renders existence very difficult, and that in consequence arrangements are pending for the recruiting of immigration to the Argentine colonies. The Governor of Wilna, to his honor be it written, in his reply to the circular advocates the abolition of educational restrictions.

There seems to have been on the part of de Plehve a special fondness for holding symposia on the Jewish question. In the spring, he summoned to St. Petersburg sixty representatives of the leading communities, and instructed them to prepare an address to the Ministry setting forth the needs of the Jews and the reforms they considered desirable. Among the things asked for were the abolition of educational restrictions and the extension of the right to reside in the country. In the course of his address to these representatives, Minister de Plehve is reported to have said: "If we admitted Jews to our universities without restrictions, they would overshadow our own Russian students, and dominate in intellectual life. The Jews have declared war on the Russian Government through the press of other countries, which your race controls. I warn you that every war costs heavy sacrifices; take care that these sacrifices are not required from you and your people. The Russian Government is disposed to improve the economic condition of the Jews in Russia, but only very slowly and cautiously. You have no prospect of obtaining the same rights of citizenship as are possessed by the non-Jewish inhabitants of Russia." For brutal candor this is admirable. It is, however, quite in accord with de Plehve's letter to Herzl, under date of August 12, 1903, written, as he says, "to remove anything that could give rise to exaggerated hopes or disquieting doubts." In this letter the Minister of the Interior expresses his approval of Zionism "insofar as it consists of a desire to create an independent State in Palestine, and offers the prospect of organizing the emigration from Russia of a certain number of her Jewish subjects." He is opposed to mere propaganda serving to bring about "Jewish national concentration in Russia," but says that the movement "could reckon on moral and material support on the day when certain of its practical measures would serve to diminish the Jewish population in Russia." The letter concludes with a reference to the amelioration of the condition of the Jews brought about by the extension of the Pale, "especially if emigration decreases their number." In an interview with Mr. Lucien Wolf some six months later, de Plehve again speaks of emigration as a potent remedy, and a cable despatch received by the Jewish Daily News, in July, 1904, indicates the organization of a movement in Russia looking towards a systematic hastening of the emigration of large numbers. When it is borne in mind, however, that the annual natural increase in the population of five millions is about one hundred and fifty thousand, and that heretofore the largest annual emigration has never nearly equalled this number, the hope of amelioration in this direction must be abandoned, unless a successful issue of Zionism should by its sentimental associations largely stimulate the movement.

Since the death of Dr. Herzl, Zionism has hardly had a chance to adapt itself to the new conditions imposed by the loss of its leader. The Sixth Congress at Basle, in August, 1903, was the largest yet held, the delegates numbering about six hundred. The two great events of the Congress were the publication of the letter from de Plehve and the East African proposition. De Plehve's letter, as outlined above, promised moral and material support to the movement. "This support," the letter says, "would consist in protecting the representatives of Zionism in their dealings with the Ottoman Government, in facilitating the action of the Emigration Societies, and even in meeting the needs of such Societies, obviously not at the expense of the State, but by contributions levied on the Jews."

The East African proposition was an offer from the English Government to place at the disposal of the Zionists a suitable tract of land in East Africa with local self-government for the people under a Jewish Governor and a British Protectorate. This subject was discussed with great heat, and by a vote of 295 to 177 it was decided by the Congress to send a Commission to East Africa to investigate on the spot and report to the next Congress, the expenses of such commission not to be a charge upon the Zionist funds. Immediately after the announcement of this vote occurred the great dramatic episode of the convention. The cheering with which the result had been received by the majority had not yet ceased when the Russian leaders of the minority arose from their places with the Actions-Committee, left the platform and marched down the centre aisle of the hall. Instantly the entire minority rose as one man, and followed their leaders out of the convention. They regarded the entire proposition, even to the extent of a Commission of Investigation, as disloyalty to the Basle platform, which calls for a "legally, publicly assured home in Palestine." They immediately went into a meeting of their own, many of them in tears and mourning, declaring the day a new Tisha b'Ab, but after an all-night session, in the course of which they permitted Herzl and Zangwill to plead with them, they returned on the following day, and participated in the concluding proceedings of the Congress.

The African proposition was not, however, so easily disposed of. What gave promise of a permanent schism was created by a conference held at Charkov, and it was only at the meeting of the Greater Actions-Committee at Vienna in April that a truce was reached, after renewed expressions of fidelity to Palestine on the part of the East African advocates.

Meantime the English people had not taken kindly to the proposition that a large tract of land be given over to "aliens," and the matter came up in Parliament on the ground of "the danger to the peace of East Africa, arising out of the steps now being taken, with the sanction of his Majesty's Government, for the establishment of an alien settlement in East Africa on lands now in the occupation of native populations." Reference has already been made to the debate on this occasion. The Commission ordered by the Congress has not yet gone, the present obstacle being lack of funds.

In America the Federation of Zionists held a convention at Cleveland in June. Professor Richard Gottheil declined re-election as President, and Dr. Harry Friedenwald, of Baltimore, was chosen his successor. At about the same time the Zionists of Pittsburg dedicated their new building, the Zion Institute. A Zion Institute was also dedicated at Cleveland.

The whole Zionist party at the close of 5664 is in gloom, and all Israel joins with it in mourning the loss of the great leader, Theodor Herzl. To speak of his qualities in moderate terms is to speak of them inadequately. What would ordinarily seem lavish praise of the dead is, in this case, simple justice to a man of heroic mould. The charm of his manner, the breadth of his cultivation, the tactfulness of his diplomacy, and the ardor of his love for his people, combined to make him the one man capable of organizing Jewry, which for two thousand years has been unorganized, and for a large part of that time has been disorganized. His tact as well as his dramatic instinct were well shown in his opening speech at the last Congress. He had the whole house rise and stand while he read from his message the brief reference to Kishineff, the silent tribute thus paid being far more effective than any oratorical display. Again, in the handling of the de Plehve letter he showed his diplomatic skill. He was publicly asked whether there was any correspondence with Russia that could be laid before the Congress, and he replied that he would answer on the following morning. On that morning he announced that the Russian correspondence would be found published in Die Welt (the official organ) of that day, and that the letter was not before the Congress for discussion. In this, as in the Kishineff matter, he eliminated a debate which could only have been bitter, and might have been disastrous to the Jews in Russia. Whether the movement which he created is permanent or not, certain it is that during his leadership it was very real, so real that when England had a proposal to make to the Jews, it was made through the Zionist organization, and when Russia wanted to announce its policy to the Jews, it was announced through him; so real that the Sultan of Turkey repeatedly negotiated with him, and the King of Italy and the Pope of Rome were willing to discuss with him the prospects of Zionism. No ordinary man this who, a decade ago unknown beyond his immediate circle, and dying before the full vigor of his powers had yet been reached, left as his mourners an organization of thousands who loved him as a father and an innumerable unaffiliated multitude who recognized in him the largest figure that has loomed on the Jewish horizon in many a century. Officially represented at his funeral were the King of England, the Emperor of Germany, the King of Italy, the Sultan of Turkey, and the President of France. Unofficially present was the whole great grief-bowed heart of universal Jewry desolate and sorrowing in its irreparable loss.

A meeting of the Greater Actions-Committee will be held on August 16 for the purpose of deciding whether a special Congress shall be called to elect a successor to Herzl. Temporarily the Committee has selected Herr Oskar Marmorek. of Vienna, to act as chairman. The success of the new Zionist leader, whoever he may be, will depend not so much upon himself as upon the intrinsic strength of the move-If Zionism continues it will be through the appreciation, by the general membership, of the world-mission which it may have. Those to whom Zionism has meant simply a philanthropic movement for the amelioration of Jewish conditions, have not grasped even the beginning of its possibilities. To gather from the fields of Mesopotamia, once the world's granary, a harvest abundant to feed the starving Orient, and, in supplying this need, to make the Jew once more a tiller of the soil; to accept from the sisterhood of states the responsibility of holding in trust the key to the East, and to establish under the guardianship of that sisterhood a State whose ideal shall be peace and whose weakness would be its strength in keeping the peace, thereby giving Judea the opportunity to work out the concepts of its teachers—these are part of that "perpetual ideal" which Dr. Herzl once called Zionism. If this "perpetual ideal" really inspires the hosts of Zionism, its leader will be found, and the movement will succeed; but if Zionism be a mere cry and vent for enthusiasm, leadership is unimportant, for not even under Herzl himself could it have achieved results.

Communal leaders, too many, has death claimed during the year: Bernard Lazare in Paris, one of the first to arouse the world to the Dreyfus infamy; Julius Plotke, of Frankfort, and Alfred L. Cohen, of London, both members of the Council of the Jewish Colonization Association; Colonel Albert E. W. Goldsmid, of London, soldier, Zionist, and founder of the English Jewish Lads' Brigade; Myer S. Isaacs, of New York, President of the Baron de Hirsch Fund since its foundation, and foremost in all good works; and Leo N. Levi, President of the B'nai B'rith, whose large soul and keen intellect inspired the Kishineff petition. His wise and energetic administration of his office raised the Order of B'nai B'rith in the brief term of his incumbency to an important body, to be reckoned with in Jewish affairs. He was succeeded as President by Mr. Simon Wolf, of Washington. At the meeting of the Executive Committee at which this selection was made, a resolution was adopted declaring that no action was to be taken upon any public question except by the concurrence of the President, Vice-President, and Honorary Secretary.

Death was busy, too, among scholars and writers. Dr.

Marcus Jastrow, rabbi and Talmudist, and Simon A. Stern, the littérateur, both of the Publication Committee of the Jewish Publication Society; Karl Emil Franzos, Jewish novelist; A. B. Arnold, physician and writer; and Chaim Selig Slonimsky, scientist and journalist, are some of those who died during the year. The passing away of two military men of high rank, Leopold Sée, French general, and Jacques Nissim Pasha, Turkish surgeon in chief, brings to mind the condition in Germany. In March, Justizrath Feigl, of Berlin, wrote to the Emperor complaining of unfair discrimination against his son in the army, stating that in thirty years not one Jew had been promoted to the rank of a commissioned officer, and he felt this all the more keenly because he himself had been a commissioned officer in the Franco-Prussian war, and had been honored with the Iron Cross. The Emperor ordered a reconsideration of the case, and after such reconsideration young Feigl was notified that he was not promoted because he did not reach the required standards.

His failure is interesting in connection with the resolutions of the German Societies for Combating anti-Semitism, setting forth the facts that there is not one Jewish officer in the army to-day, and there are but two Jewish surgeons, and protesting that the discrimination is not made frankly as against the Jews, but always on the ground of unfitness. It is remarkable how circumstances alter cases, and the unfit become fit. At the outbreak of the Russo-Japanese war, of 180 Russian surgeons sent to the front, 110 were Jews. The discrimination here assumed a most contemptible shape, the non-Jewish doctors getting 1250 roubles for travelling expenses, while the Jews got but 900 roubles. Nor does Jewish unfitness extend to Austria, where Sigfried Popper, chief engineer of the Austrian navy, was promoted to the rank of general.

No pleasanter picture can be found than by turning to Italy, where Luigi Luzzati has been appointed Minister of the Treasury, and Dr. Alessandro d'Ancona, Signor Eduardo Arbib, and Baron Alberto Trevis dei Bonfili have been appointed senators by the King. There are now nine Jewish senators in Italy.

In France, the affaire is still the affaire. Another revision of the Dreyfus case is in process at the time of this writing. It is of interest to note that Dreyfus's son was Bar Mizwah in Paris during the spring.

In Holland, Josef Israels celebrated his eightieth birthday and his friends and admirers presented him with a testimonial in the shape of 20,000 gulden. With a greed for gold which all anti-Semites agree is a universal Jewish trait, he offered the money to a fund for the erection of a suitable building for Rembrandt's great picture, "The Night Watch." Israels has been elected a member of the Berlin Academy of Fine Arts.

The year's benefactions include three notable instances. The Rothschilds in Paris set aside 10,000,000 francs for the erection of model dwellings for the poor. In New York, Mr. James Loeb donated $500,000 for the establishment of a Conservatory of Music, and Mr. Adolph Lewisohn gave to Columbia University $250,000 for the erection of a new building for its School of Mines. Unique of its kind was the gift of a collection of books by Mayer Sulzberger to the Jewish Theological Seminary of America, causing its library of Hebraica to rank among the three or four most valuable in the world.

The first graduation from the Seminary since its reorganization took place in the early summer, and was an event of imposing and dignified character. The conferring of an honorary degree upon Lewis N. Dembitz is noted, not alone because of the high attainments of the recipient, but also because the title of Doctor of Hebrew Literature was here bestowed for the first time.

The installation of Dr. Kaufmann Kohler as President of the Hebrew Union College awakened renewed interest in that institution, and the half-million dollar "Isaac M. Wise Memorial Fund" has so far progressed that subscriptions to it amounting to $400,000 have been obtained.

The biennial session of the National Conference of Jewish Interest centred chiefly Charities was held in New York. in the day on the East Side, when, by visits to the institutions there and general inspection of the quarter, delegates from other cities were shown the overcrowded conditions and the need for co-operation in the work of the Removal Committee. This work has gone on increasingly, the number of removals from New York during 1903 having been 5525, as compared with 3208 during the preceding twelvemonth. The total number of removals from New York made by the Society in its three years of work now aggregate 13.000. the face of the tremendous number of arrivals this would seem useless but for the thought that those established elsewhere will serve to attract their relatives and friends to the same places, and thus ultimately secure the diversion of a considerable number from New York.

The tendency towards a resumption of agricultural pursuits has been more marked, although it cannot be said to have reached an epidemic stage. The Hebrew Colonial Society of Maryland, an organization of Russian tailors living in Baltimore, has bought a considerable tract of land near that city, and its members contemplate carrying on their work there in conjunction with tilling the soil. A similar spontaneous movement is on foot at Pittsburg, and yet another in Texas. As these were all undertaken at the initiative of the people concerned, they hold forth far more hope of success and of duplication by others than had they been set in motion by charitable or semi-charitable organizations.

With the growth and dispersion of population in America, synagogues have been established where a few years ago Jews were unknown, and over forty houses of worship were dedicated during the year. The Union of American Hebrew Congregations is organizing circuit preaching under the directorship of Rabbi Zepin. Several new Jewish newspapers were launched, and one monthly magazine was reorganized and made into a valuable addition to the list of periodical publications. The American Israelite celebrated its semi-centennial anniversary. The establishment of the Voice of Sinai at Calcutta, the only Jewish paper in India, bears testimony to the widespread scattering of the Jewish people.

American Jewry looks with confidence into the future. Growing in numbers and importance, in culture and the means of culture, it recognizes the problems wherewith it has to deal and its shortcomings in handling them. The closer kinship with the newcomer has been slow of attainment, yet those on the lookout see the signs of the better day. If that day shall dawn during the coming year, joyfully will Israel write 5665 as a happy New Year.

REV. GERSHOM MENDEZ SEIXAS

"The Patriot Jewish Minister of the American Revolution"

BY N. TAYLOR PHILLIPS, LL. B.

"Through all Eternity to Thee A joyful song I'll raise. For oh! Eternity is too short To utter all Thy praise."

The foregoing, with the Thirty-fifth Psalm, poetically arranged, was written by Rachel Levy in a Festival Prayerbook, now in the possession of the writer, printed in Amsterdam in the year 1726, in which are also recorded the births of her children, one of whom is the subject of this sketch. She was the daughter of Moses Levy, who was born in Spain about the year 1665. When quite a young man he went to London, where he became a merchant, and was the owner of many vessels engaged in the trade with the north of Africa. He arrived in New York about 1705, and he immediately took an active interest in the affairs of the Spanish and Portuguese Congregation Shearith Israel in New York City. He was for several years, and at the time of his death, which occurred 14th of June, 1728, its Parnas (President). He was buried in the Cemetery on New Bowery, New York, of the Congregation, and the inscription on his tombstone, which is in Hebrew, Spanish, and English, can still be seen. Rachel Levy, his daughter, married in 1741 Isaac Mendez Seixas, born 1708, a native of Lisbon, Portugal. He was a merchant in New York, and afterward removed to Newport, R. I., where he engaged in active business until his death in 1780. His remains repose in the ancient Jewish cemetery at Newport, made world-renowned by Longfellow's beautiful poem. He was one of the signers, in 1770, of the agreement to make more stringent the "Non-importation Agreement," whereby the merchants of the Colonies took the first concerted action to resist the oppression of Great Britain.

All the six children of Isaac Mendez Seixas and Rachel Levy became prominent in American Jewish history. Their son, Gershom Mendez Seixas, was born in the city of New York on the 14th of January, 1745. At a very early age he evinced a disposition to follow the Holy Service of the Synagogue, and when but five years old read a portion of the prayers in the Synagogue of the Congregation Shearith Israel in New York City. As early as 1766 he adopted the ministerial profession, and was formally elected and installed, with considerable ceremony, as pastor of the above-mentioned Congregation, which position he occupied amid vicissitudes for half a century. It is said that he was always a serious man, and, even when very young, by his bearing and manner he impressed those with whom he came in contact as being very much further advanced in years.

From the beginning he seems to have secured the affection of the members of his Congregation. He was an ardent patriot during the preliminaries to the struggle for independence, and it is related that when at length the crisis came, rather than continue the Synagogue under British auspices, he closed the doors of the edifice, which act was fiercely contested, even families being split apart as the result of it. Many of the members of the Congregation were merchants in active business in New York City, and their interests naturally were with the Tories rather than with the feeble little band of patriots endeavoring to secure freedom for the Colonies. When the patriot members of the Congregation were about to flee from the city upon the appearance of the British fleet in New York Bay in August, 1776, preparatory to the occupation of the city by Lord Howe, the Rev. Gershom Mendez Seixas preached a sermon in English, in which he feelingly stated that the service on that occasion might be the last to be held in the historic old edifice situated in Mill Street (now South William Street), then approaching the half-century mark, and we are told that it was delivered with such force and eloquence that tears were shed by all present, men and women alike.

He left New York to seek retirement in Stratford, Conn., where he took with him for safe-keeping the scrolls of the law and the articles of ceremonial belonging to the Congregation. The records of the Congregation Shearith Israel show by statements rendered by the Rev. Mr. Seixas how he personally superintended the closing of the Synagogue and the transfer of its property in his flight from the city before the enemies of his country. By 1780 the Jewish patriots who had fled to Philadelphia, which city was selected by many as a place of refuge after incurring the displeasure of the Tories elsewhere, demanded the establishment of a permanent Congregation, and the Rev. Seixas was requested to officiate, which he consented to do. He at once left Connecticut, taking with him the sacred objects of holy worship, and established at Philadelphia the Congregation Mickvé Israel, a majority of the members being patriot refugees from New York. When the newly-erected house of worship was ready for dedication, he was one of a committee who waited on the Governor of Pennsylvania, inviting him to attend the ceremony. The occasion was most impressive, the Rev. Seixas delivering a memorable patriotic address, and it is related that he invoked the blessing of Almighty God "on the members of these States in Congress assembled, and on his Excellency George Washington, Commander-General of these Colonies."

During his entire stay at Philadelphia he continued his labors in the cause of liberty. I must digress here to mention the public spirit that was manifested by the Seixas family whenever tyranny or oppression became evident. Certain it is that the brothers of Gershom Mendez Seixas were just as strongly devoted to the patriotic cause as the minister himself. One of them, Benjamin, was an officer of the Patriot Militia in New York at the outbreak of the Revolution. He was also one of the founders of the New York Stock Exchange. Another brother, Abraham Mendez Seixas, was a colonel in the Georgia Brigade of the Continental Army, serving actively and zealously throughout the entire struggle, and a magistrate of the City of Charleston, S. C. He was distinguished as an officer in the confidence of Generals Lee and Laurens. The eldest brother, Moses, was also devoted to the patriotic He addressed a letter of congratulation to George cause. Washington, upon the first President's inauguration, to which General Washington sent a reply, the original of which is still in the possession of his descendants. Moses Mendez Seixas was one of the founders, and for many years, until his death, President, of the Bank of Rhode Island at Newport, and the first Grand Master of Masons of the State of Rhode Island. A word must also be said of Grace, sister of Gershom Mendez Seixas, who shared the natural ability possessed by her brothers. She was thoroughly conversant with many of the subjects to which her sex are usually strangers, and could discuss politics, finance, and commercial affairs with startling intelligence. Many of her writings are still in the possession of her descendants, and display striking evidence of her capacity.

To return to the subject of this sketch. After the city of New York had been evacuated by the British, the Rev. Gershom Mendez Seixas returned to his native city, March 23, 1784, and assumed his old charge as Minister of the Spanish and Portuguese Congregation. He was recognized as a truly patriotic American and a public-spirited citizen. There never was an occasion of general thanksgiving or day of fasting or prayer in which he did not take the initiative in leading the congregation in a public manner. He was one of the first ministers of any denomination to preach a regular Thanksgiving sermon on Thanksgiving Day and conduct services in connection therewith. To Leon Hühner, Esquire, the wellknown Curator of the American Jewish Historical Society, we are indebted for the discovery of much valuable information relating to the career of the Rev. Gershom Mendez Seixas. In an excellent article published in the Jewish Comment, January, 1902, he observes:

Washington's proclamation to him was more than a mere formality, and the Jewish minister received it in the proper spirit. His conduct in this connection was extensively commented on by the press of the day, and among others the following extract from the Daily Gazette, December 23, 1789, may not be inappropriate here. After stating that a discourse had been delivered by the Rev. Gershom Seixas in the Jewish Synagogue on Thanksgiving Day, November 26, 1789, it continues: "This excellent discourse (to which is annexed the order of service), the first of the kind ever preached in English in this State, is highly deserving the attention of every pious reader, whether Jew or Christian, as it breathes nothing but pure morality and devotion."

Theology never crowded out other themes in this minister's sermons; he seems constantly to have seized on subjects that agitated the public mind and from which some lesson could be drawn or which would enlist the sympathies of his audience in some charitable enterprise. The country and its institutions were always favorite subjects with him.

He instituted a recital of a prayer for the Government in English, it having been theretofore always read in the Spanish language, insisting that as Americans his Congregation could not tolerate the use of any tongues but the sublime one of Israel and that of their adopted country. Whenever it was necessary to raise money for public purposes—for example, to carry on the wars, to repel invasion, to relieve the sufferings of persons in other States who had endured Indian incursions, etc.,—the Rev. Mr. Seixas never deemed it beneath his dignity as a Jewish minister to invite public free-will offerings in the Synagogue for these objects, and I have drafts of formulas in Hebrew, in his handwriting, for use on such occasions.

His name is found in the charter of Columbia College as one of the original incorporators, and he was a trustee of the College from 1787, the year of incorporation, uninterruptedly until 1815, in which year he resigned the position. He is the only Israelite who has ever sat upon the Board of Trustees of that institution, they being uniformly of the Episcopalian faith. He was highly respected and esteemed by his associates on the board and by the ministers and ecclesiastics of the Church of England in New York, and it was common for him to deliver addresses in the Episcopal diocese of this city. One of these, which was delivered in St. Paul's Church in the month of August, 1800, contained an historical sketch of the Jews in New York City up to that time. The suggestion to follow the example of the Rev. Seixas in inviting Episcopal ministers, clothed in their robes of office, to seats on the altar of the Synagogue during divine service would probably at this date be considered out of place, but it was common enough then.

The distinguished Jewish divine received many public honors. On the inauguration of President Washington as the first President of the United States, at New York, 1789, the Rev. Mr. Seixas with thirteen other clergymen of various denominations participated in the ceremonies, which notable fact may serve to remind American citizens for all time that our republic is founded on the very broadest principles, tolerating every race and creed, and American Israelites should ever recall with pride that the lives of Hebrews like the Rev. Gershom Mendez Seixas and his brothers, who cheerfully offered their lives and fortunes for the establishment of American independence, give to their brethren throughout the world a right of asylum on these shores which no truehearted or grateful American will ever have the temerity to challenge. The Jews of New York City can also ever be proud of the fact that while the clergy of other religious faiths, with scarcely an exception, sided with Great Britain against the Colonies, the Rev. Gershom Mendez Seixas, "the Patriot Jewish Minister of the American Revolution," from the very beginning of the struggle, loyally and unflinchingly took his stand for the cause of liberty, and constantly made the walls of the only Synagogue on the Island of Manhattan ring with his eloquence in behalf of the doctrine of human rights, educating his Congregation to strike for liberty, until the day finally arrived when, as a magnificent climax to his efforts, he led forth a majority of his flock in flight northward over the plains of Harlem and Washington Heights to a seven years' exile from the city of their birth, abandoning in a single day homes and fortunes.

Something of the Rev. Mr. Seixas' public spirit during the War of 1812 may be shown by a sermon, recently reprinted, which was delivered at the time when many were violently opposed to the existing administration for having declared war with Great Britain. After admonishing his hearers to support the administration of President Madison, he said:

For the citizens at large it is sufficient for us to know that our rulers are chosen to be judges on all affairs concerning the welfare of their constituents. They have declared war, and it is our bounden duty to act as true and faithful citizens, to support and preserve the honor, dignity and the independence of the United States of America, that they may bear equal rank among the nations of the earth.

These sentiments are followed by a touching appeal to his flock to help the families of those whom the war has impoverished, and by a description of the horrors of war, which he calls on Heaven to end.

Witness the distressed situation of our fellow-citizens on our frontier settlements in the northern boundaries of our State; driven from their peaceful abodes in this inclement season of the year, their houses sacked and burned, destitute of food, raiment and of every necessary of life, often without a place to shelter them from the most piercing cold . . . . consider for a moment the distress of twelve thousand souls in such a pitiable situation; widows and orphans, who after passing their blood-stained villages, their houses burnt, deprived of parents, husbands, sons, with many of their nearest and dearest connections massacred by ferocious savages and the unrelenting mercenaries of an implacable and inhuman enemy . . . Think, oh think, brethren, what must such a multitude suffer! Deprived of their earthly comfort, where it is not in the power of one to help another . . . . many would despair in such a miserable situation, but it is to be hoped that the kindness of Providence will still strengthen their minds to support the trials they are now laboring under. Who can hear so deplorable a recital without a sense of feeling? Humanity is shocked with the melancholy narrative. . . . Vouchsafe to accept our prayers and penitence, O Lord; deliver us from our present impending evils, and guard us in future from those who rise up against us; frustrate the designs and machinations of the enemy; restore us to the bosom of peace. . . . Let us be always ready and willing to ameliorate the conditions of the unhappy, and in the first instance of benevolence enable us to assist our fellow-citizens in the Northwest Territory at this juncture.

The Rev. Gershom Mendez Seixas was twice married, his first wife being Miss Elkalah Cohen, whom he married September 6, 1775. The following is a copy of the record of their marriage as contained in the archives of the Congregation Shearith Israel in New York: "On Wednesday, the 11th day Elul, September 6th, 1775, was married Hazan Gershom Mendez Seixas to Miss Elkaley Cohen, in New York." She was born in the year 1749 and died October 30, 1785. Their children were Isaac, born at Stratford, Connecticut, July 30, 1776, who lived but three hours; Sarah, born at Stratford, Connecticut, January 9, 1778, who married Israel B. Kursheedt; Rebecca, born in Philadelphia in 1780, died 1867, unmarried; and Benjamin, died at Baltimore, Maryland, unmarried. His second wife, to whom he was married on the 1st of November, 1789, was Miss Hannah Manuel. He had returned to New York City after the Revolutionary War, where they were united in marriage. The children of this second marriage were: David, unmarried, the founder of the Pennsylvania Institution for the Deaf and Dumb in Philadelphia (this institution was opened May, 1820, temporarily, at Mr. Seixas' residence, and still exists as one of the monuments of Philadelphia benevolence); Joshua, a learned Hebraist and text-book writer, and at one time a professor at Andover, who married Miss Raphael, of Richmond, Virginia; Theodore J. and Henry N., twins, born 1803, the first of whom married Anna, daughter of Naphtali Judah, and died 1822, and the second of whom died single; Grace, born December 7, 1789, married February 1, 1815, Manuel Judah, and died in Richmond, Va., August 20, 1826; Elkalah married Benjamin Solomons; Samuel, born in 1793, died in 1852; Rachel, born January 11, 1801, married Joseph Jonas, one of the pioneers of Cincinnati, and died in Cincinnati, February 19, 1827; Lucia Orah, born December 26, 1804, married Abraham Jonas, brother of Joseph Jonas, and died in Cincinnati, June 15, 1825; Selina, born 1806, married Lucius Levy Solomons, and died 1883; and Myrtilla, born November 22, 1807, married William Florance, of Philadelphia.

The death of Rev. Gershom Mendez Seixas occurred at 9 A. M. on July 2, 1816, Tammuz 6, 5576. Obituaries were published in various papers throughout the United States, and services in his memory were held both in New York and Philadelphia. Some of the eulogies delivered were published in pamphlet form, and I have copies of addresses delivered at his funeral by Dr. Jacob De La Motta, the Rev. Emanuel N. Carvalho, minister of Congregation Mickvé Israel, of Philadelphia, and by the late Mr. Naphtali Phillips, who was at that time President of the Congregation Shearith Israel, of New York, the last eulogium being delivered at the request of the Board of Trustees as a memorial of their beloved pastor. One paragraph, which strongly illustrates his career, reads as follows: "This city was not only his birthplace, but his favorite spot, and he spent the whole of his virtuous life within it, excepting those years when, during the Revolution, he fled from the enemies of his country while they held it in occupation, for America was the country of his love." His remains were interred and still rest in the old Cemetery on New Bowery, New York City, of Congregation Shearith Israel, and the following is a copy of the English inscription which was on his tombstone. It is now entirely obliterated:

In 1902 the "Hebra Hased Va Amet," a Society attached to the Congregation Shearith Israel having for its object the relief of indigent sick and the burial of the dead, which was founded by the Rev. Gershom Mendez Seixas, celebrated its centennial anniversary. The Rev. Mr. Seixas' purpose in organizing the Society, which is now in a flourishing condition after a century of activity, was to secure for every Israelite of New York City not only substantial relief in his last hours, but respectable interment upon his demise. He foresaw the need of such practical charity for Jews in a great cosmopolitan city like New York, and his wisdom has been abundantly vindicated. As a tribute to his memory, and to perpetuate the virtues of this sterling patriot and distinguished clergyman, the Society caused to be erected a tablet of bronze and marble in the beautiful Synagogue of the Congregation Shearith Israel, Seventieth Street and Central Park West, New York City, where worship the descendants of New York's pioneer Jews, who revere the memory of the man, the lustre of whose life has shed glory upon the Congregation and upon American Israel for over a century, Gershom Mendez Seixas.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF JEWS PROMINENT IN THE PROFESSIONS, ETC., IN THE UNITED STATES

The Biographical Sketches which follow are a second instalment of the series begun in the AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK for 5664. The Sketches there published were of Rabbis and Cantors officially connected with congregations in the United States. On pp. 214-225, will be found additions to the list of last year, designed to keep it up to date.

It is intended to complete the series of Biographical Sketches in the American Jewish Year Book for 5666, in which an attempt will be made to present the biographical data of the men and women who are doing the communal work for the Jews of the United States.

The present instalment does not deal with so unified a set of personages as the first dealt with and as the third is designed to deal with. It aims to bring together the names and biographical data of the Jews in the United States who have won a place in the professions, in the arts, the sciences, in journalism, in business, in public life. Only one class of professional men and women have been excluded from the present instalment, namely, those who have trained themselves to preside over Jewish charitable institutions; the superintendents and directors of the charities, the superintendents of orphan asylums and kindred institutions, the probation officers, the social settlement workers, etc. Their vocation is so closely allied to the activities that will constitute the ground for inclusion in the next instalment of sketches that it seemed proper to associate them with the communal workers whose leaders and guides they are.

A number of cases, indeed, proved the scheme of classification adopted arbitrary. Many of the personages whose biographical data are presented below have put their attainments and their abilities in the service of the Jewish community. On the other hand, a few of those addressed began their careers as professional men, but are now engaged entirely in the service of the community. Their biographies have therefore been reserved for the next instalment.

A word as to the data given below. The list does not lay claim to completeness. That it is not even so complete as it might have been made with the co-operation of all persons addressed will appear from the circumstance that blanks and circulars were sent to over nine hundred persons, and only about 475 complied with the request for information. Among those not heard from were some whose biographical data are so well known that they have been compiled from various reference books and inserted. An asterisk (*) marks information not obtained directly from the subject of the sketch.

The circular letters were first sent out in May, a month in which the summer travel to Europe had begun. This may in a measure account for the paucity of responses received from actors, musicians, painters, artists of all sorts. Likewise army and navy men, in which the list is deficient, move from place to place so frequently and rapidly in the exercise of their profession that it is difficult to reach them within a given short time through their permanent address.

These deductions, great as they are, do not cover the large number addressed and not heard from. Among them are, besides authors, editors, physicians, lawyers, engineers, and representatives of many other professions and occupations. Over and above all this it must be admitted that if the editorial miracle had come to pass, and the co-operation of all persons addressed had been secured, the list would still have been incomplete, as any list the first of its kind must inevitably be.

This branch, besides making remittance to the Paris headquarters, provides for an emergency fund.

On April 7, 1904, a public meeting was held by the Alliance Israelite at the High St. Temple to protest against the Lodge immigration amendments, in which it was provided that only a citizen of this country can be instrumental in bringing to this country other persons from abroad. The outcome of the meeting was that Mr. Levy communicated with Senator Lodge, pointing out to him the obvious injustice of such a measure.

At a meeting held on May 22, 1904, the Elmira Branch of the Alliance Israélite Universelle adopted resolutions calling on this Government to obtain from Russia such uniformity of treatment and protection as may tend to secure the honoring of American passports by the Russian Government, irrespective of the religious faith of their holders.

Among the speakers were Representative Goldfogle of New York, ex-Mayor Hoos, Assistant Corporation Attor-

Among the speakers were Frank Moss, the Rev. H. Masliansky, and Jos. M. Baum, president of the Israelite Alliance of America.

Mr. Marshall read a letter from the Department of State at Washington, D. C., addressed to the Israelite Alliance, stating that the Government of the United States had given instructions to its representatives in Persia and Morocco to use the good offices of the United States in favor of the inhabitants of Persia and Morocco who do not profess the dominant religion of those countries. This step in the Government's policy was brought about by a series of letters exchanged between the Israelite Alliance of America and the Department of State.

The propaganda carried on during the year by Mr. Nissim Béhar, the American Representative of the Alliance, was devoted to acquainting Jews living in towns in the vicinity of New York City with the aims and objects of the Alliance Israélite Universelle and inducing them to appoint standing committees in the various cities for the purpose of helping persecuted Jews.

AMERICAN JEWISH HISTORICAL SOCIETY

The Twelfth Annual Meeting of the American Jewish Historical Society was held in New York City, March 20-21, 1904, after arrangements had been made to meet at Baltimore on Lincoln's Birthday, which were changed on account of the Baltimore fire. The first session was held Sunday evening the 20th, in the Vestry Rooms of the Spanish and Portuguese Synagogue. Dr. Cyrus Adler, President of the Society, was in the chair, and delivered the presidential annual address at the opening session.

The Corresponding Secretary, Mr. Max J. Kohler, reported that the Society has on its rolls 237 members: 7 Honorary, 26 Corresponding, 3 Life, and 201 Regular Members. It lost 11 members during the year by death, resignation, and non-payment of dues. and 7 Regular Members and 1 Corresponding Member were elected during the same period.

Professor Richard J. H. Gottheil, Treasurer, reported that the Society's receipts during the year ending October 1, 1903 (including a balance on hand October 1, 1902, of $1120.36), aggregated $1968.07, and its expenditures were $841.57, leaving a balance of $1126.50 besides a special fund of $2404.86. In addition to these amounts $1500 insurance money was collected by the Society, by reason of the destruction by fire of its "Publications" in Baltimore.

Professor J. H. Hollander, Chairman of the Publication Committee, reported that vol. 11 of the Society's "Publications" had just been issued and distributed, its appearance having been delayed by the fire aforementioned. Considerable additional material to make up a further volume was reported to be in the possession of the Committee.

Mr. Leon Hühner, Curator, reported that arrangements had been completed with the Jewish Theological Seminary of America for storing the Society's "Collections" in the fire-proof building of that institution, a separate room having been set aside for the use of the Society.

A resolution was adopted, directing the issuance of a circular to members and other friends of the Society, calling their attention to the fact that the Society was able properly to house such books, manuscripts, prints, medals, and other objects of historic interest, as persons interested might desire to entrust to it, and that in this way efforts might be made to enlarge its collections. The circular was also to call attention to the Society's desire to secure back volumes of its "Publications" by gift or otherwise, to replace the stock lost by fire.

On recommendation of the Council of the Society, the following resolution was adopted:

"That the American Jewish Historical Society views with favor proposals concerning the collection of statistical information concerning the Jews of America, and authorizes the appointment of a committee to co-operate with other organizations having a like purpose."

The President appointed, to constitute such committee, Professor J. H. Hollander, Chairman; Joseph Jacobs, Esq., and Professor Morris Loeb.

A resolution was also adopted providing for the appointment of a Committee of five, to take up the subject of indexing American Jewish periodicals, with power to add to their number. The President appointed, to constitute such committee, Max J. Kohler. Esq., Chairman; A. S. Freidus, Esq.; George A. Kohut, Esq.; Miss S. X. Schottenfels, and A. M. Friedenberg, Esq. The Committee subsequently added to its numbers Mr. Joseph Jacobs, Miss Henrietta Szold, and Mr. Julian Isaacs.

WOODBINE

The year 1903 was an important year for Woodbine, New Jersey. It found it a settlement in the Township of Dennis: it left it a Borough in the County of Cape May, and the year 1904 witnessed a growth unparalleled in the history of the settlement.

During 1903-1904, 20 houses were built in the town, making a total of 226. Only 13 of these belong to the Baron de Hirsch Fund. Eighteen are rented, and the balance, over 85 per cent, are occupied by the owners. The total estimated cost of these houses is $200,000, of which amount more than one-third has been paid by the owners. Each house is surrounded by a garden and a lawn; and some are covered with ivy, grapes, or rambler roses.

The Borough of Woodbine celebrated, in a fitting manner, the tenth anniversary of its birth by passing an ordinance providing for the building of a Central School House at a cost of $15,000. It will have a large hall for dancing and social entertainments of all sorts, and two smaller rooms for the social work of Debating Clubs, Reading Circles, etc., together with recreation grounds, equipped with tennis courts, base ball grounds, etc. There are also among the organizations doing excellent social work a Girls' Club, a Mothers' Club, and Reading Circles. The school house when completed in November, 1904, will be the only High School within a radius of sixteen miles. Besides the Central School there are at present in the Borough of Woodbine five school houses, with an aggregate of thirteen rooms, an enrollment of 413 pupils, and an average daily attendance of 388. Also a night school, with an enrollment of 55, and a kindergarten are maintained by the Board of Education. The number of graduates from the public schools was 16, 30 per cent of the total number in Cape May County, with its 15.000 inhabitants as against Woodbine's 2500.

The Borough of Woodbine now has two synagogues, one a large brick building, the other a frame building recently purchased from a Christian congregation. Rabbi B. L. Levinthal, of Philadelphia, has been elected Chief Rabbi of Woodbine, and a house has been built for him to serve as his summer residence.

The majority of the residents are employed in the industrial establishments of Daniel and Blumenthal, which employs 200 hands; the Quaker City Knitting Company, employing 115 hands; Ingber and Werthelmer, manufacturers of ladies' garments, 50 hands; the M. L. Bayard Machine Shop, 26 hands; The Woodbine Beef and Storage Company, 13 hands; Paper Box Factory, 7 hands; Woodbine Cigar Company, 6 hands; Stone Brothers and Company, Ladies' Garments, 6 hands; Soap Manufacturing Company, 5 hands, and Hat Factory, 40 hands; making a total of 468 hands, who earn an average of $8.00 per week, $1.50 per week more than the average earnings of factory employees in the United States, as computed in the Annual Report for 1903 of the United States Commissioner of Labor. The total pay roll of the Woodbine industries for 1903 was $176,036.36.

At a recent election, Professor H. L. Sabsovich was re-elected mayor of the borough for the ensuing two years.

There are at present 42 farmers in Woodbine. One of them realized $324.72, and several $125 and more, after paying all running expenses during the past year.

THE BARON DE HIRSCH AGRICULTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL

During 1903-1904, 182 pupils were enrolled in the Baron de Hirsch Agricultural and Industrial School. Fifty-five were graduated, 15 left the school before graduation, and 112 are at present at the school. The average age of the pupils in 1903 was 17.1; in 1902, it was 16.4; in 1901, 16.1, and in 1900, 15.6. The status of the pupils in 1903 was as follows: orphans, 10; half-orphans, 28; with parents in Austria, 1; with parents in Roumania, 6; with parents in Russia, 17; with parents in the United States, 78. All but one are free pupils, and they are receiving tuition, room, board, clothing, etc., during the entire term. The school has a dormitory with a capacity of 100; a teachers' cottage; a dining hall; a kitchen; a hospital, and other buildings, such as silos, barns, seed stores, blacksmithshop, two greenhouses, hot beds, etc. school owns a herd of 23 cows, 2 bulls, 10 horses, 29 acres of orchards, 4 acres of nurseries, 4.5 acres of grapes, 4.5 acres of small fruit, and about 600 fowls.

The pupils of the school have organized the De Hirsch Literary and Debating Society, the Davidsonian Club, four football teams, two baseball teams, and a volunteer fire company.

* EDUCATIONAL LEAGUE

The Educational League for the Higher Education of Orphans with headquarters in Cleveland, O., was organized in 1896, and its first annual meeting was held in July, 1897. On June 30, 1903, it counted 1218 members, chiefly girls and boys, living in 58 towns, in the following states: Alabama, Arkansas, Colorado, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Louisiana, Maryland, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Nebraska, New York, North Dakota, Ohio, Pennsylvania, Tennessee, Texas, and Wisconsin, and one member each in Canada and Germany. Among the members are 5 Honorary Life Members, 127 Patron Members, and 1086 Contributing Members.

The chief purpose of the Educational League is to give talented young men and young women a chance to develop their powers. The benefits of the organization are restricted to orphans. Assistance has been given to seven young men and one young woman; two students of medicine, one of whom is now a practicing physician; two art students, one of whom is doing newspaper work; one is studying for the ministry; one is a student of dentistry; one is studying music, and one student of science, who has returned the loan made to him.

In connection with the Educational League, local "Sunshine Clubs" have been organized among the members, for the purpose of inculcating the idea of "personal service," and emphasizing the underlying thought of the League, that it is a work of children for children."

FEDERATION OF AMERICAN ZIONISTS

The Seventh Annual Convention of the Federation of American Zionists was held June 3-7, 1904, at Germania Hall, Cleveland, O. The Convention was noteworthy not only for the repetition of the enthusiasm referred to in last year's report, but for an increase in the delegation. The Credentials Committee reported 188 delegates as being present. Owing to the illness of Professor Richard Gottheil, Mr. G. H. Mayer, Eastern Vice-President, presided, occasionally resigning the chair to Mr. Leon Zolotkoff, Western Vice-President. A long message from Dr. Herzl on the East African question and the presidential address of Professor Gottheil were read, the latter followed by a vote of thanks acknowledging his services as President of the Federation. It was also resolved to record Professor Gottheil's name in the Golden Book of the National Fund.

The Executive Council report showed that 308 organizations are regularly and completely affiliated with the Federation, 65 of them under the control of the Order Knights of Zion; the net gain of new organizations during the year was 102 societies. The report showed in much detail the changes in figures that had taken place in the number of organizations, and described the effects of the Constitution passed last year, creating the local councils, of which there are now nine. The income from all sources was $6339.68, the balance in hand being $497.96. The Shekel Day receipts equalled payment for 7356 shekel payers, which, together with the regular payment of shekel taxes, brought the total up to 14,000 shekel payers; and the real membership of the movement in America to about 21,000 members. The report further showed the receipts on account of the National Fund to be a considerable gain on last year, and the sale of 802 Jewish Colonial Trust shares also a gain on last year's sales; payments on Golden Book entries amounted to more than twice the amount remitted on the same account last year. It was further shown that there had been a considerable advance in the general work of organization and the establishment of centres and Zion Homes, of which there are now four, in Pittsburg, Baltimore, Philadelphia, and Cleveland.

The Committee on Education reported on the enlistment of 700 boys in the ranks of the Jewish Boys' Brigade, and the Committee on Organization on the grouping of the orthodox element into a "Mizrachi."

The Board of Deputies reported in detail on the work of the various councils, and the Convention itself carried out its work by means of sectional conferences. The other features of the Convention were the reading of the roll of all Zionists throughout the country who had died during the previous year; and the further amendment of the Constitution, providing: (a) for the renaming of the Executive Council as Executive Committee; (b) for the enlargement of the Executive Committee; (c) for the regulation of the number and election of the members; (d) for the creation of departmental chairmanships, including a chairmanship for women's organizations; (e) for the defining of the work of every officer of the organization; (f) for the defining of the work of local councils, districts, and territorial boards, and of the Board of Deputies: (g) for the issue of a membership card to every member of the movement and of certificates of membership to each organization.

Through the various conferences resolutions were brought in and approved for the founding of a Yiddish magazine, for the development of the work of the "Mizrachi," for the establishment of Hebrew classes and a system of tuition for Jewish children, and for the general supervision of the education of Jewish children throughout the country. It should be added that this last phase of Zionist work attracted considerable attention, far more than had been accorded it in any previous year.

One session of the Convention was given over to a paper by Dr. Maurice Fishberg, of New York City, on "Physical Culture and the Jews," and a presentation of views by Mr. Joseph Seff on Removal Work.

A meeting was held of the stockholders of the Maccabæan Publishing Company, at which the Directors reported considerable advance in the position of the Company.

The Convention declined to discuss the East African project, but authorized the convening of a special Convention, if necessary, for the discussion of that issue when the Special Commission sent to investigate the East African domain shall have reported. In connection with this action the Convention renewed its pledges of loyalty to the leaders of the movement, expressed its satisfaction with the administration of Dr. Herzl, and recommended various steps for the regulation of the business of future Congresses.

A large number of social functions were held in connection with the Convention, and the delegates acknowledged the hospitality of their Cleveland co-workers.

When the news of Theodor Herzl's death reached this country, the President, Dr. Harry Friedenwald, issued a message to the Federation, and through the Secretary made a series of recommendations to the constituent organizations regarding the expression of mourning. In obedience to these recommendations, the memory of the departed leader was honored by offerings at the synagogue on Sabbath, July 16; memorial meetings were held in many cities on Sunday, July 17; and memorial services (Hespedim) at the synagogues on the Ninth of Ab, Thursday, July 21. Also the whole month of Ab was observed as a period of mourning by Zionist societies, and they countermanded all social affairs previously arranged for.

INDEPENDENT ORDER FREE SONS OF ISRAEL

The Independent Order Free Sons of Israel was founded in 1849. The fundamental object of the organizers was to provide the family of a deceased member with a sufficient sum to relieve the immediate necessity of the family, insure proper burial of the deceased, and leave to the living members of the family a helpful sum. Equally fundamental was its second object, to spread "intelligence and enlightenment," and bring about the Americanization of the Jew. Though a majority of those who first sought membership had but a limited knowledge of the English language, the Order prescribed that as soon as possible the proceedings of the lodges should be in the English language. And it likewise advocated at this early period the bringing into the lodge room of Jews from all countries.

The Independent Order Free Sons of Israel is under the government of the Grand Lodge of the United States, a body that meets in general convention once every five years. Each lodge in the United States is entitled to send a representative to the convention, which selects the general officers and an executive committee.

Furthermore the United States have been divided into two divisions; namely, District Grand Lodge No. 1 with headquarters in New York City, and District Grand Lodge No. 2, with headquarters in the City of Chicago. These local divisions likewise have officers and an executive committee. They attend to the immediate needs of the lodges under their jurisdiction, with power to appeal, if need should arise, to the United States Grand Lodge.

The policy of the Order is not to establish buildings of its own for the housing of the sick or needy, but to contribute toward such Jewish institutions as exist, whether they be maintained by local bodies in various cities or by another Order. The Order, for example, contributed $10,000 to the new Mount Sinai Hospital in New York. In the City of Chicago it owns a valuable burial ground, notwithstanding its contributions to the local charities.

At present funds are being collected and plans being formed for the following: In New York City it is proposed to erect a "Free Sons of Israel Building" at a cost of $100,000, having meeting rooms, reception rooms, lecture rooms, general assembly rooms; a building in which local lodges may meet, concerts, lectures and entertainments be held, and in which members, friends, and visitors may be entertained. In Chicago funds are now being gathered for the erection of the new hospital by the Jewish citizens of Chicago.

The Order now counts 107 lodges with an aggregate membership of 12,000. It has a Reserve Fund of $1,000,000, and has during the more than fifty years of its existence paid $4,000,000 to widows, orphans, and other beneficiaries; during the same time the individual lodges of the Order have disbursed $3,165,000 for benefits and donations. The funds of the individual lodges at present aggregate $333,277.00. The Order pays an Endowment benefit of $1000.00 in case of the death of a member, and in addition provides for its sick and maintains a Relief Fund for its needy. No members are taken into the Order except such as participate in the Endowment Fund.

INDEPENDENT ORDER OF B'NAI B'RITH

An occurrence deeply lamented by the members of the Order. as well as by all Jews interested in the welfare of the race. befell in the death of Leo N. Levi, President of the Fraternity. With all the energy and enthusiasm of his nature President Levi devoted himself to the task of widening the influence of the organization and of bringing it into prominence as something of international import. That he succeeded in accomplishing this in the short three years of his Presidency, is evidence of the strength and sincerity of his convictions and the weight of his ideas. He led the Order into the field of many new activities. He it was who, pledging the loyalty of all the lodges in this country, instituted and achieved the organization of the Industrial Removal Work, and his prompt remonstrance through the Government against the atrocities perpetrated at Kishineff brought the Order into deserved world-wide prominence.

At a meeting of the Executive Committee of the Order held in New York on February 14, 1904, the Honorable Simon Wolf, of Washington, D. C., was elected to succeed Mr. Levi.

When, in December, 1903, rumors of an intended uprising against the Jews of Kishineff were circulated, the Order addressed a letter to the Secretary of State requesting him to ascertain the state of affairs in Southern Russia. As a result, a cablegram dated December 31, 1903, was received at the State Department from the Ambassador at St. Petersburg, in which the reports were condemned as entirely unwarranted. The Ambassador also reported that Kishineff had been in a state of thorough tranquillity for a considerable period. This despatch was made public, together with a letter dated December 29, 1903, from the United States Consul at Odessa which verified the report of the Ambassador. In this matter, the Order acted in agreement with the Anglo-Jewish Association, London, England, and the Alliance Israélite Universelle, Paris.

During the past year the Order has put itself into close communication with the Anglo-Jewish Association, and with the Alliance Israélite Universelle, so as to be in a position to cooperate in behalf of American Jews, with these representative bodies of Jews in England and France, in all undertakings looking to the amelioration of the condition of Jews.

On the organization of the Industrial Removal Work by President Levi, it was given in charge of a joint committee known as the Industrial Removal Committee of the Jewish Agricultural and Aid Society. An account of the results achieved by this Committee will be found under the heading The Industrial Removal Office, pp. 249-251.

The Executive Committee has considerably assisted the refugees from Roumania and Russia. There have been many deplorable cases among assisted immigrants, who come here principally from England. The Government, ordinarily humane and considerate in its treatment, under an imperative law has deported a considerable number of these unfortunates. In response to the efforts of the Order to ameliorate conditions, the Immigration Bureau maintains that it has no power in the matter, the only remedy being the repeal of the present law or such an amendment thereof as may enable such persons, under a humane interpretation of the policy of our Government, to escape from being classified as Assisted Immigrants.

The Executive Committee of the Order at its meeting in Atlantic City in July, 1902, authorized and directed the President to formulate plans for conducting a bureau for the placing out of orphan children. This action of the Committee was communicated to the Executive committee of the National Conference of Jewish Charities, which entrusted the entire project to the Order, tendering at the same time the co-operation of its committee in formulating modes of proceedure.

The Executive Committee has seriously considered the advisability of continuing the experiment, and has concluded, from the results at hand, that it would be unwise to persevere in the attempt to establish the proposed Bureau; it is of the opinion that before a National Bureau can be undertaken, serious local efforts should be made in the many centres of Jewish population.

The building established on Forsyth Street, New York City, has been the centre of good work during the last two years. The Executive Committee decided to transfer the building to the charge of District No. 1, fearing that they were usurping the functions of that District, in the jurisdiction of which the building is situated. An Employment Bureau, opened March 15, 1904, had been attached to the building proper by the Executive Committee, which had intended to establish also a Bureau of Civic Information. These activities were turned over to District No. 1, with the building, on July 1, 1904.

The statistics of the Employment Bureau show a record of four hundred situations procured since its inception.

There has been a general increase of the Order in all its Districts, despite losses by death and resignation. The net increase in District No. 1 is 179; in District No. 2, 179; in District No. 3, 177; in District No. 4, 28; in District No. 5, 286; in District No. 6, 24. There is a substantial increase in the members of District No. 7, and of the foreign Districts as well.

THE INDUSTRIAL REMOVAL OFFICE'

The work of the Industrial Removal Office during the past year has been very considerably increased, the total number of persons sent away from New York since the inauguration of the movement being 10,563. Applying to this number the percentage returning to New York, we have 10,000 persons who have been sent away and who have remained away from the city.

It will be observed that there was a smaller proportion of single men among those sent out this year than in the previous year; for obvious reasons the heads of families have been given the preference over single men.

The occupations of the persons removed cover as wide a range as in former years, and the places to which they were sent are likewise as numerous. A most gratifying sign is the large number of cases sent by "request," and upon the advice and consent of the receiving community. These are chiefly cases in which a husband, or some other member of a family, had previously been sent away, and his progress was sufficiently encouraging to justify him in sending for his relatives. Of such cases the records of the current year show a total of 47 per cent. No more gratifying testimony can be had to the satisfactory nature of the employment found for those removed from New York than is furnished by the fact of sending for relatives.

It should be said that in some cases the head of the family left New York without assistance from this office, and, after being sufficiently well established to warrant his doing so, requested the Bureau to send his family to join him, the alternative being his return to New York to join them, because of the natural desire for reunion and insufficient funds to pay transportation charges.

The number of such cases, however, is not large; the vast bulk of those sent by request followed the man originally sent away by the Removal Office, whose success attracted his relatives. The power of this attraction cannot be measured solely by the removals made directly through the Committee. According to the statistics gathered by the representative of the Removal Office at Ellis Island of the Jewish immigration that arrived at the port of New York in the years 1900, 1901, and 1902, 73 per cent had the City of New York as their ultimate destination; of those arriving in the current year 691/2 per cent were destined for New York. On the basis of immigration for the current year, this shows that the number of persons who moved directly and at their own expense to the interior towns was 31/2 per cent, or 2224 persons more than last year. Furthermore, the unfailing experience of the past twenty years has been that the establishment of a number of Jewish immigrants at a given point speedily results in attracting a considerable additional number to the same point, so that it is reasonable to expect that the 10,000 persons who have been sent away in the past three years will bring five times their number to the same places within the next decade.

During the year 1903, 5525 persons were sent out from New York: 485 families removed with their heads, 206 families following their heads (the two classes comprising 2896 persons), 318 married men who had their families in the United States, 983 married men whose families were in Europe, and 1328 unmarried men.

In classifying the men sent out according to their occupation, we find the following facts for 1903:

Mechanics Clerks Laborers Teachers Peddlers in New York	2.5% 23.7% 4%
reddiels in New Tolk	100%

To ascertain the results of the work, regular inquiry sheets are sent to the local communities some weeks after each case has been sent out. Those inquiry sheets are returned to the New York Office after being filled out by the receiving committee. The information thus obtained yields the following result of the work done from November 1, 1902, to November 1, 1903. The tables cover 3347 cases, consisting of 5525 persons, and they make a comparison with results for the same period of 1902, as stated in last year's report:

ISRAELITE ALLIANCE OF AMERICA

The Israelite Alliance of America held a number of meetings during the year at which the various committees presented reports of their work for discussion.

The Pope Petition Committee met several times to consider the "Blood Accusation" problem.

The Union of Orthodox Jewish Congregations of the United States and Canada assisted this committee by furnishing it with copies of petitions addressed by the Union, the preceding year, to the Pope and to Pobiedonostseff, in which an urgent appeal was made to the heads of the Roman and Greek Catholic Churches to declare the ritual murder charge against Jews as unfounded, and incompatible with the Jewish religion. The Union having received no reply to these petitions, the Israelite Alliance decided to frame a petition on the same question, to be signed only by prominent Gentiles of all denominations. Rabbi S. Schulman has undertaken to study the matter historically, collate the facts, and frame the memorial.

In accordance with the aim of the organization, to bring to the notice of the public Russia's discriminations against American citizens of the Jewish faith, the secretaries wrote articles for publication on the Russian American passport question.

THE JEWISH AGRICULTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL AID SOCIETY 1

1. FARM LOANS

During 1903 the Jewish Agricultural and Industrial Aid Society granted 117 farm loans, amounting in the aggregate to $46,590.51; during the first six months of 1904, 72 farm loans, amounting in the aggregate to $28.835.69.

Including the loans turned over to the Society by the Baron de Hirsch Fund, it has now on its books over five hundred farm loans made to an equal number of Jewish families.

2. Home Building Loans

During 1903 the Society granted 38 home building loans, amounting in the aggregate to $16,919.00; during the first six months of 1904, 7 home building loans, amounting in the aggregate to $3029.00, to industrial families in rural districts, and it has now on its books 52 home building loans granted to an equal number of Jewish families since the incorporation of this Society.

OFFICERS AND LIBECTORS.—President, Cyrus L. Sulzberger; Vice-President, Eugene S. Benjamin; Treasurer, Eugene Meyer; Secretary, Percy S. Straus; Mark Ash, Morris Loeb and Fred. M. Stein, all of New York City.

General Manager, William Kahn, 725 Broadway, New York City.

THE JEWISH AGRICULTURISTS' AID SOCIETY OF AMERICA

Compared with former years, the Jewish Agriculturists' Aid Society of America more than doubled its work during the year 1903. Eighty families were assisted to settle on as many farms during the year. Of these, fifty-nine settled under the homestead law on free Government land, each taking possession of one hundred and sixty acres of land. Seventeen purchased farms in the States of Michigan, Indiana, and Wisconsin, and four rented lands in Illinois and Iowa. All these were more or less assisted by the Society, loans having been made to them in sums from one hundred to one thousand dollars. In all the Society loaned out nearly $26,000.00 during the year. This amount was expended in the purchase of live-stock and implements, for building material, for seed, and for feed needed for the live-stock during the first few months. The transportation of the families from the city to the farm, as well as clothing, shoes, and provisions, which in some instances were furnished to the families, were paid for from the general fund of the Society.

In doing its work, the Society has followed its old method. The loans made to its protégés are secured by mortgages, which become a lien on the real and personal property of the borrower. The loans are repayable in installments, arranged to suit the case of the borrower, and they bear interest at the rate of four per cent per annum. The Society up to the present has assisted nearly three hundred families, aggregating over 1450 persons. Many of these families have repaid the loans made to them, principal and interest in full, and are now in a prosperous condition.

The Society proposes to expand its work and operate on a much larger scale than hitherto. Thus far the benefits of the Society have been extended to people in Chicago, and the means for its operation were gathered chiefly in that city, excepting what aid has been extended to it by The Jewish Agricultural and Industrial Aid Society, of New York. In pursuance of the policy of expansion, applicants from outside the city of Chicago were assisted during the first half of the present year, from January 1 to July 1, 1904.

BOARD OF DIRECTORS.—President, Adolph Loeb; Vice-President, Emil G. Hirsch; Treasurer, Edward Rose; Secretary, Hugo Pam; Corresponding Secretary, Dr. A. R. Levy, 507-511 S. Marsfield Ave., Chicago, Ill.; Israel Cowen, Harry Hart, Jacob L. Kesner, Adolph Moses, David M. Pfaelzer, Dr. J. Rappaport, Julius Rosenwald, Emanuel F. Selz, Milton L. Strauss, Morris Weil.

Students attending universities and colleges which permit the election of professional or post-graduate studies as the major portion of the work of the senior year, and who are otherwise properly qualified, may be admitted to the regular Rabbinical Course upon the presentation of a certificate of the satisfactory completion of their three years' college work. provided they present satisfactory assurance that they will immediately proceed to obtain their Bachelor's Degree. of the elective system in American colleges, it is strongly recommended to students intending to enter the Seminary that they especially devote themselves during their college course to the following subjects: English literature, rhetoric, and composition; ancient and medieval history; philosophy, psychology, and logic; German, Greek, and Latin. In the case of students presenting a certificate from a European institution, the English requirements may be temporarily waived, with the understanding, however, that the prescribed English must be completed before final graduation. to the Seminary. The Gratz College, of Philadelphia, prepares students for admission to the Seminary.

The delegates were afforded every opportunity for the inspection of the numerous institutions of New York City. They spent an entire afternoon on the lower East Side, thus securing, at first hand, knowledge of the conditions there existing as a result of the overcrowding. There can be no doubt that by reason of this the work of the Industrial Removal Office will be greatly assisted by the co-operation of the interior communities.

Another result of the session is the appointment of a committee to devise means for the establishment of a National Child-Placing Bureau, to obviate the commitment of dependent children to institutions whenever some other treatment may be preferable.

The Committee on Scholarships reported that since the last Conference three men had been given training in social work.

Daily average number of patients during 1903, 78.3; discharged from December 10, 1899, to January 1, 1903, 288; died from December 10, 1899, to January 1, 1903, 32; total, 320; discharged from January 1 to December 31, 1903, 151; died, 4; total 155. Discharged from December 10, 1899, to January 1, 1904, 439; died, 36; total, 475.

Daily per capita expenses during 1903: for maintenance, $1.10; for maintenance and other expenses, $1.48.

The term "greatly improved," as used in the above report, is intended to convey that, though not entirely recovered, patients have so much improved that they are able to follow their usual vocations amid the proper sanitary surroundings, and in most instances are able to support themselves and their families.

In the list of patients since December, 1899, nearly every State and every city of note in the country has been represented.

It will be noted in the above statistics that a great many deaths occurred during the first year. This is due to the fact that as there was room in the institution, patients who were in the last stages were taken in because they had no shelter, nor care, nor food. Again, that many patients lost ground or died after leaving the institution markedly improved, was due to several causes. Most of them left the institution before they ought to have done so and against the advice of the medical attendants, because they felt their strength returning and were anxious to provide for themselves and their families. They could not be made to understand that the improvement in their condition would not last unless a longer time were given to build up the system. Others received letters from home describing the want and privations other members of the family were suffering. Whether warranted or not, such news produced worry and home-sickness in the patients, and they returned to their homes to take care of their Others, again, notwithstanding the attending physicians' advice to remain in Colorado after discharge, returned to their old homes and to the same conditions that caused the disease in the first instance, and succumbed. However, as shown by the tabulated statistics, a relatively large number of discharged patients are at their former homes and are doing well.

In considering the statistics, the reader must remember that very few incipient cases are received in the hospital. The class of patients cared for by the Hospital do not have the opportunity to discover incipient consumption, and even if they should, they have not the means to take care of themselves at once. Otherwise results would be greater still.

The rules governing the admission of patients to the Hospital have received the endorsement of the authorities of the Agnes Memorial Hospital, Denver, founded by Lawrence Phipps in honor of his mother, and endowed with a very large fund. The organizers of this institution inspected the best hospitals of Europe and America, and in the end adopted, with slight alterations, the rules of the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives, which the latter, being at the time of its establishment the only charitable institution in America for the free treatment of the tuberculous poor, had formulated as the result of its own experience. The modifications made by the Agnes Memorial Hospital tend to make the rules more stringent. As in the National Jewish Hospital, only curable cases are accepted, but the time limit is six instead of twelve months. By reason of the longer limit the Jewish Hospital is continually confronted with the problem of caring for those who are dismissed either because of the expiration of their time or because they are found incurable. In all cases a guarantee for the care or the return of the patient to his or her home is on hand. But the return is often undesirable, and committees are now at work to solve this problem, so that light labor for a period after dismissal can be provided. That would give many a slowly-improving patient an opportunity to get the full benefit of the climate. It is highly desirable that patients before attempting to go to the Hospital, or those interested in patients, shall acquaint themselves with the rules governing the admissions of patients. They will be found in full on pp. 151-153, AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK, 5664.

The Guggenheim Pavilion, dedicated January 25, 1903, was the gift of M. Guggenheim's Sons, and was erected at a cost of $35,000 in memory of their mother Barbara Guggenheim. This, though it increased the facilities appreciably, has not fully met the needs of the institution. The waiting list is crowded largely with women. There is urgent need of a new woman's pavilion so that the segregation of the sexes may be more strict, besides giving the additional much-needed room.

During the summer of 1904 a stretch of ground in front of the Hospital was cleared and seeded. The free use of this frontage is given by the New York owners of the property until such a time as it shall be disposed of.

The Hospital management has in contemplation the immediate erection of two long tents with adjustible sides. These will materially assist the patients in getting the greatest possible good out of the open air.

SOCIETY OF AMERICAN CANTORS

The work accomplished by the Society of American Cantors since its reorganization in May, 1903, has established it firmly as a factor in the development of Judaism in America and more particularly in the development of the Cantorate in America.

The celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Salomon Sulzer, which took place on March 22, 1904, at Temple Ahavath Chesed Shaar Hashomayim, New York City, was a notable event, and it was so considered by the rabbinate and the Jewish press of the country and by all persons interested in the regulation of the Jewish divine service. Three addresses were delivered, one on Salomon Sulzer, by the Rev. A. Kaiser. of Baltimore, the President of the Society; one by the Rev. Dr. I. S. Moses, of New York City, on "The Cantor as a Religious Functionary," and the third by the Rev. Dr. Joseph Silverman, New York City. The members of the Society together with the choirs of the various congregations of New York City sang selections from Sulzer's "Schir Zion." In honor of the occasion the Society had published a souvenir volume of selections from this work of Sulzer's, adapting them for use at the Friday evening service in the American synagogues.

At the suggestion of the Society, the Central Conference of American Rabbis had fixed a date, the last Sabbath in March, on which all the members of the Conference were requested to speak to their congregations on the life and influence of Sulzer. In the course of the year there had appeared the first biographical sketch of Sulzer in the English language, written and published by a member of the Society, the Rev. S. Rappaport, New York City.

The First Annual Meeting of the Society of American Cantors since its reorganization (the Eleventh since its formation) took place on March 23, 1904, in New York City. It was resolved to publish the annual report of the Society and include in it the program of the Sulzer celebration and, in extense, the three addresses delivered on that occasion. The pamphlet, under the editorship of the Rev. S. Rappaport, has since appeared.

At a meeting of the Board of Directors of the Society held at Philadelphia on April 10, 1904, it was resolved to issue a supplementary volume to contain all the music for Sabbath morning and the three Festivals, adapted and arranged for the American synagogue.

The following advisory committee was appointed to outline a plan for the future activity of the Society: Chairman, H. Silverman; Secretary, S. Rappaport, Ed. Kartschmaroff, D. Cahn, Theo. Guinsburg, M. Martin, all of New York City; Ed. Stark, San Francisco, Cal.; M. Goldstein, Cincinnati, O.; Wm. Loewenberg, Philadelphia, Pa.

A local branch of the Society for New York City was organized on November 15, 1903. During the winter of 1903-1904 it undertook to furnish, and did furnish, a cantor, every Saturday afternoon, for the divine service at the Educational Alliance, besides holding itself ready to meet all local emergencies that arise from time to time in the community. A movement is now on foot to make efforts tending toward uniformity in the worship, music, and hymns of the educational and benevolent institutions of New York City. Officers and Trustees.—President, S. Rappaport, 256 W. 98th; Vice-President, Ed. Kartschmaroff; Secretary, Joseph Mandelberg; Theo. Guinsburg, D. Cahn.

OFFICERS AND BOARD OF DIRECTORS.—President, Alois Kaiser, Baltimore, Md.; Vice-President, S. Rappaport, New York City; Treasurer, Ed. Kartschmaroff, New York City; Secretary, Wm. Loewenberg, 1842 North 13th, Philadelphia, Pa.; David Cahn, Theo. Guinsburg, and H. Goldstein, New York City.

The Secretary reported eight new members, elected during the year.

The first evening of the Convention, the address of welcome was delivered by Rabbi Morris Newfield, of Birmingham, Ala., the response by the Rev. Dr. I. L. Leucht, of New Orleans, La., and the president's message by the Rev. Dr. Max Samfield, of Memphis, Tenn.

The following papers were presented during the sessions: "The Jew as Statesman," by the Rev. Dr. Henry Barnstein, of Houston, Tex.; "Marcus Jastrow—his Life and Times," by Rabbi Wolf Willner, of Meridian, Miss.; "The Position and Influence of the Southern Rabbi among non-Jews," by Rabbi Joseph Blatt, of Columbus, Ga.; "Methods of Studying the History of Southern Jews and Judaism," by Rabbi Alfred G. Moses, of Mobile, Ala.; "Modern Tendencies in Judaism,' by Rabbi David Wittenberg, of Jacksonville, Fla. An address on "Circuit Work" was also given by Rabbi George Zepin, Director of Circuit Work of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations. The Executive Committee presented a report on "Rabbinical Ethics."

The invitation of the Jewish Orphans' Home of New Orleans to meet in that city in January, 1905, and participate in the fiftieth anniversary of the institution, was unanimously accepted.

It was moved to devote an entire day of the next session to a

There were present upwards of fifty members, out of a membership of somewhat more than eighty. In the absence of the Rev. B. L. Levinthal, of Philadelphia, the earlier sessions of the Convention were presided over by Rabbi A. J. G. Lesser, of Cincinnati.

On the receipt of the news of the death of Theodor Herzl, resolutions of respect to his memory were adopted, and a eulogy pronounced by Rabbi S. Margolies, of Boston. On the last evening but one of the Convention, a memorial service under the auspices of the Mizrachi wing of the Zionist organization was held at the synagogue of the Anshe Suwalk Congregation, which was attended by the rabbis in a body, the service being conducted by Rabbi J. D. Ridwas, of Chicago, and the Rev. Dr. Philip Klein, of New York. Among the speakers were Rabbis Sivitz, of Pittsburg; Lasker, of Troy; Rosenberg, of Brooklyn; Goodman, of Jersey City; and Rosenberg, of Bayonne, N. J.

The following resolutions were passed: That laymen be invited to join the organization in order to represent the orthodox congregations in all matters save those pertaining to the rabbinical law; that a conference of teachers be convened to draft the curriculum for Talmud Torahs; that a special organization to strengthen orthodox Judaism be called into existence; and that the authorities presiding over Talmud Torahs and Yeshibahs be requested to institute lectures for the young on Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

THE AMERICAN PASSPORT IN RUSSIA

The National Convention of the Republican Party held at Chicago, Ill., adopted, June 22, 1904, the following declaration:

We commend the vigorous efforts made by the Administration to protect American citizens in foreign lands and pledge ourselves to insist upon the just and equal protection of all our citizens abroad. It is the unquestioned duty of the Government to procure for all our citizens without distinction the rights of travel and sojourn in friendly countries, and we declare ourselves in favor of all efforts tending to that end.

The National Convention of the Democratic Party held at St. Louis, Mo., adopted, on July 8, 1904, the following:

We pledge ourselves to insist upon the just and lawful protection of our citizens at home and abroad, and to use all proper measures to secure for them, whether native born or naturalized, and without distinction of race or creed, the equal protection of laws and the enjoyment of all rights and privileges open to them under the covenants of our treaties of friendship and commerce; and if, under existing treaties, the right of travel and sojourn is denied to American citizens or recognition is withheld from American passports by any countries on the ground of race or creed, we favor the beginning of negotiations with the governments of such countries to secure by treaties the removal of these unjust discriminations.

We demand that all over the world a duly authenticated passport issued by the Government of the United States to an American citizen shall be proof of the fact that he is an American citizen, and shall entitle him to the treatment due him as such.

These two declarations, although general in terms, refer, as a matter of fact, to the Russian Empire. Though the abuse at which they are aimed concerns all the citizens of the United States, it more specifically affects those of the Jewish faith, whether natural born or naturalized. Article VI, Section 2, of the Constitution reads as follows:

This Constitution, and the Laws of the United States which shall be made in Pursuance thereof; and all Treaties made, or which shall be made, under the authority of the United States, shall be the supreme Law of the Land; and the Judges in every State shall be bound thereby, anything in the Constitution or Laws of any State to the Contrary notwithstanding.

From this it will be seen that it is part of our fundamental system that all treaties made with the authority of the United States are the supreme law of the land. The relations of this Government with the Russian government so far as commerce, access, and travel are concerned, rest upon the treaty of 1832. The first article of this treaty reads as follows:

There shall be between the territories of the high contracting parties a reciprocal liberty of commerce and navigation. The inhabitants of their respective States shall mutually have liberty to enter the ports, places, and rivers of the territories of each party wherever foreign commerce is permitted. They shall be at liberty to sojourn and reside in all parts whatsoever of said territories, in order to attend to their affairs; and they shall enjoy, to that effect, the same security and protection as natives of the country wherein they reside, on condition to their submitting to the laws and ordinances there prevailing and particularly to the regulations in force concerning commerce.

By the wording of this treaty, the executive branch of the government is obligated to secure, in Russia, equal rights, without any distinction whatsoever, for all citizens of the United States.

That such rights are not secured may be learned from the following circular issued by the Secretary of State to naturalized American citizens born in Russia who apply for a passport with the intention of travelling in Russia:

 alization as a citizen of the United States, and asking whether, in the event of your return for a limited period to your native country, your passport as an American citizen will protect you from molestation or punishment from the Russian authorities. In reply, you are informed that, according to this Department's information, it is a punishable offense under Russian law for a Russian to become a citizen of any other country without Imperial consent. Although this law is at variance with our institutions and our statutes, this Government cannot encourage American citizens whom the law might affect to expect immunity from its operations if they place themselves within its sphere.

The laws of Russia also exclude from Russian territory, except by special permission, all people of the Jewish faith, and while this Government has been endeavoring for some years past to secure a relaxation of these enactments, it is only proper to warn those who are within the category to which they refer that it has not yet been able to secure from the Russian Government a promise of uniform treatment for all American travellers in Russia, without regard to their religious faith or place of birth.

I am, sir, Your obedient servant,

The refusal of the Russian Government to abide by the terms of its treaty and the obligation of the United States, both by law and treaty, to the protection of all its citizens has led to discussion in various quarters. On two occasions it has formed the subject of reference in the annual message of the President of the United States to the Congress. President Arthur, in December, 1883, wrote:

While there has arisen during the year no grave question affecting the status in the Russian Empire of American citizens of other faith than that held by the national church, this Government remains firm in its conviction that the rights of its citizens abroad should be in no wise affected by their religious belief.

Again, in 1895, President Cleveland made the following statement in his message to Congress:

Correspondence is on foot touching the practice of Russian consuls within the jurisdiction of the United States to interrogate citizens as to their race and religious faith, and upon ascertainment thereof to deny the Jews authentication of passports or legal documents for use in Russia. Inasmuch as such a proceeding imposes a disability which in the case of succession to property in Russia may be found to infringe the treaty rights of our citizens, and which is an obnoxious invasion of our territorial jurisdiction, it has elicited fitting remonstrance, the result of which, it is hoped, will remove the cause of complaint.

But long before this diplomatic correspondence was active on the subject. Indeed, it is not too much to say that the violation of this article of the Treaty of Commerce of 1832 has been the principal cause of difference between our own country and that of the Czar. A cursory examination of the diplomatic correspondence of the United States offers a mass of material on the subject, double in size of that which could be contained in a volume like the present one. As early as 1866, a case of this kind formed the subject of correspondence between Cassius M. Clay, our Minister to St. Petersburg, and William H. Seward, and there were other sporadic cases, but it was not until 1880 that diplomatic correspondence concerning the Jews in Russia became active. William M. Evarts, in forwarding a communication on the subject to John W. Foster, Minister to St. Petersburg, under date of April 14, 1880, observed:

You are sufficiently well informed of the liberal sentiments of this government to perceive that whenever any pertinent occasion may arise its attitude must always be in complete harmony with the principle of extending all rights and privileges, without distinction on account of creed.

On June 28, 1880, he wrote:

I have to observe that in the presence of this fact, that an American citizen has been ordered to leave Russia on no other ground than he is the professor of a particular creed, or the holder of certain religious views, it becomes the duty of the Government of the United States, which impartially seeks to protect all its citizens of whatever origin or faith, solemnly, but with all respect to the Government of His Majesty, to protest. . . . The United States could not fail to look upon the expulsion of one of its citizens from Russia, on the simple ground of his religious ideas or convictions, except as a grievance, akin to that which Russia would doubtless find in the expulsion of one of her own citizens from the United States on the ground of his attachment to the faith of his fathers.

It appears, however, that the person involved was obliged to leave Russia. Nevertheless, our Government did not abandon his case, for on September 4, 1880, Mr. Evarts wrote to Mr. Foster as follows:

If the meaning of this is that a citizen of the United States has been broken up in his business at St. Petersburg, simply for the reason that he is a Jew rather than a believer in any other creed, then it is certainly time for this government to express itself as set forth in the instructions above mentioned. It should be made clear to the Government of Russia that in the view of this government the religion professed by one of its members has no relation to that citizen's right to the protection of the United States, and that in the eye of this government an injury officially dealt to Mr. Pinkos in St. Petersburg, on the sole ground that he is a Jew, presents the same aspect that an injury officially done to a citizen of Russia in New York for the reason that he attends any particular church there, would to the view of His Majesty's Government.

But this strong protest apparently had no result, for on October 20, 1880, Mr. Foster reported to the Department of State that "it became his unpleasant duty to report another similar case," which later formed the subject of correspondence between John W. Foster, when Secretary of State, and Andrew D. White, the latter writing: "I am satisfied that sooner or later the Russian Government must modify or repeal its illiberal laws respecting the Jews, and I will lose no opportunity to do what I can to hasten that event." On October 7, 1880, Mr. Foster addressed a note to the Russian Government on the subject, and on October 22 of the same year, Mr. Hay wrote to Mr. Foster with regard to this case as follows:

Your course appears to have been discreet, and it is hoped that you will press your representations to the successful establishment of the principle of religious toleration for our citizens peacefully travelling abroad, which we as a nation have such a deep interest in maintaining.

On December 30, 1880, Mr. Foster reports an interview with M. de Giers. The dispatch, which is a very long one, contains an account of interviews both with the Minister of Foreign Affairs and with General Melikoff, Minister of the Interior, and from it the following paragraphs are quoted:

It will be seen that the answer to my protest, in the case of Pinkos, is in substance that all the acts of the Russian authorities complained of were in strict accordance with the existing laws. In Wilczynski's case the minister states that, in view of the intervention of the legation, he will be permitted to return to St. Petersburg and remain for six months. It is to be noted that this is the extreme length of time granted to any foreign resident upon his national passport.

Notwithstanding the definite character of these replies, I deemed it important to hold the conference with the minister, agreed upon in my last visit, and I accordingly called at the foreign office at the hour designated, on the 16th instant, and was received by Mr. de Giers. I thanked him for the prompt answer which he had given to my notes in regard to Pinkos and Wilczynski, but said that I had thought it desirable to have a personal interview (especially as the conclusions reached by his government in neither case were entirely satisfactory), as in this way we might the better reach some understanding and avoid future trouble. His answer in the case of Pinkos was that all the acts complained of were in strict accordance with the laws. In my effort to investigate the question I had found great difficulty in learning what the laws were in relation to the Jews. find no digest of them, but had been given a large volume, in the Russian language, of nearly twelve hundred pages, which I was informed related exclusively to the laws and regulations governing the Jews in Russia. It appeared almost impossible for me to learn what the laws now existing were, and he could readily understand the difficulty a foreign Jewish merchant or visitor would have in understanding them. I recognized the considerate attention which the Russian Government had shown to all the requests of the legation regarding American Jews; but my government objected to the discrimination on account of religion or race, which made the intervention of the legation necessary. It claimed for its citizens of the Jewish faith the same rights and protection extended to other American citizens, and insisted that there should be no distinction in applying the treaty guarantee of reciprocal liberty of commercial intercourse. If the Russian government was not prepared to concede this, then until the views of these two governments could be harmonized, as new cases were constantly arising, it was desirable to know what the Russian laws and regulations in regard to foreign Jews were, and whether some general rule or course of action could be indicated, so that American Jews would know what treatment they might expect.

The minister, Mr. de Giers, answered that the Russian Government had found the Jewish question a very vexatious and disagreeable one, both as to the internal relations, and the treatment of foreign Jews.

So far as concerned Jews who were bona fide American citizens (not disguised German Jews), he would assure me of the most liberal treatment, as he knew it was the desire of the Emperor to show all possible consideration to American citizens. If such came to St. Petersburg and encountered any trouble, if I would merely send him an unofficial note, he would give them all the time I might ask for them to remain here to attend to their business. He expected to go to see the Emperor that day and would inform him that he had given me assurance that the American Jews should have this privilege, and he was sure his sovereign would approve his action; but this would be a special exception, as the existing laws must stand for the present for the protection of the government.

I thanked the minister for the consideration which he proposed to show to this class of my countrymen and to the legation, and assured him that I highly appreciated the friendly spirit manifested towards the United States. I was, however, sorry to learn that the laws could not be entirely repealed, as such a course would be much more in accordance with the views entertained by my government, and it would be highly gratifying to it to see all prohibitions against Jews, naturalized or foreign, abolished.

I have further to report that, acting upon the spirit of the instructions contained in your No. 2, of April 14 last, and with the object of impressing more fully upon the ministry the views of our government on the general subject of reform in Jewish legislation, I have also had a conversation with the minister of worship, who listened with much interest to my presentation of the subject. He said that a commission was now engaged in studying the question of reform in these laws. He frankly recognized that the laws were not fully in accordance with the spirit of the age, and stated that it was the earnest desire of the Russian Government to conform its code on this subject more nearly to the civilization of this century, but it found itself surrounded by many difficulties to which other nations were not subjected, and that great prudence had to be exercised in the remedial measures taken. . . . .

I thought proper to again visit the foreign office on yesterday, and in recalling the subject to Mr. de Giers' attention, I referred to my interview with the minister of the interior, General Melikoff, as very pleasant and cordial, but said that that interview developed more fully that the Russian Government was disposed to grant what we desired only as a favor when my government asked it as a right. We objected to any discrimination being made against American citizens on account of religion, as our government was bound to extend equal protection to all its citizens without distinction; and, while I highly appreciated the consideration which it was proposed to show to American citizens of the Jewish faith, I feared my government would not be satisfied with the attitude which was assumed on the question as a matter of right.

In a dispatch dated March 3, 1881, Mr. Evarts, in a letter to Mr. Foster, shifts the discussion to the sole ground of American citizenship in the following words:

I have observed, however, that, in some of your conversations and writings with the foreign office, you give prominence to the natural American sympathy with oppressed Jews elsewhere as a motive for our solicitude as to the treatment of the Jews in Russia. Such solicitude might very properly exist; but in your presentation of the facts you should be careful to impress that we ask treaty treatment for our aggrieved citizens, not because they are Jews, but because they are Americans. Russia's treatment of her own Jews, or of foreign Jews resorting thither, may, in determinate cases, attract the sympathy of the American People, but the aim of the Government of the United States is the specific one of protecting its own citizens. If the hardships to which Russian and foreign Jews are subjected involves our citizens, we think we have just grounds for remonstrance and expectancy of better treatment.

This government does not know or inquire the religion of the American citizens it protects. It cannot take cognizance of the methods by which Russian authorities may arrive at the conclusion or conjecture that any given American citizen professes the Israelitish faith. The discussion of the recent cases has not yet developed any judicial procedure whereby an American citizen, otherwise unoffending against the laws, is to be convicted of Judaism, if that be an offense under Russian law; and we are not disposed to regard it as a maintainable point that a religious belief is, or can be, a military offense, to be dealt with under the arbitrary methods incident to the existence of a "state of siege."

This government is not unmindful of the difficulties under which, as is alleged, that of Russia labors in dealing with those of her subjects whom she may deem disaffected; but the reasons adduced and methods adopted against them should have no application to American citizens sojourning peacefully for business or pleasure, in Russia, for they are not to be charged with abstract political disaffection to a government to which they owe no allegiance; and, if charged with the commission of unlawful acts, they should have guilt explicitly imputed and proven. In the latter case, the religion of the accused cannot be admitted as proof or presumption, either of guilt or innocence.

It is not the desire of this government to embarrass that of Russia by insistence upon these points with any degree of harshness, when the disposition reported in your dispatches is so conciliatory, and when the treatment offered may operate effectively to remove or prevent future causes of complaint based on the ill-treatment of American citizens alleged to be Jews. It is most desirable, however, that you should not pretermit your efforts to bring the matter to such a stage as will insure for peaceable and law-abiding Americans in Russia like treaty rights and personal freedom of creed as Russians enjoy in the United States.

All the answers of the Russian Foreign Office to the representations of the United States appeal to the fact that the proscriptive laws against the Jews were in existence prior to the treaty of 1832; that they, therefore, must be assumed under the treaty, and, furthermore, that the Jewish question in Russia presented economic and other difficulties, and that the Jews were allied with the Revolutionary Party. In a dispatch from Mr. Blaine to Mr. Foster, dated July 29, 1881, there occur the following passages, which are worthy of note, and which effectually disputed this claim:

These questions of the conflict of local law and international treaty stipulations are among the most common which have engaged the attention of publicists, and it is their concurrent judgment that where a treaty creates a privilege for aliens in express terms, it cannot be limited by the operation of domestic law without a serious breach of good faith which governs the intercourse So long as such a conventional engagement in favor of the citizens of another state exists, the law governing natives in like cases is manifestly inapplicable.

I need hardly enlarge on the point that the Government of the United States concludes its treaties with foreign states for the equal protection of all American citizens. I can make absolutely no discrimination between them, whatever be their origin or creed. So that they abide by the laws, at home or abroad, it must give them due protection and expect like protection for them. Any unfriendly or discriminatory act against them on the part of a foreign power with which we are at peace would call for our earnest remonstrance, whether a treaty existed or not. . . . .

From the time when the treaty of 1832 was signed down to within a very recent period, there had been nothing in our relations with Russia to lead to the supposition that our flag did not carry with it equal protection to every American within the dominions of the empire. Even in questions of citizenship affecting the interests of naturalized citizens of Russian origin, the good disposition of the imperial government has been on several occasions shown in the most exemplary manner; and I am sure the actual counselors of His Majesty cannot but contemplate with satisfaction the near approach made in 1874 to the arrangements of negotiation for a treaty of naturalization between the two countries. . . . .

The imperial ordinance of the Czar Alexander I. of 13th August. 1807, decrees a rigid system of passports for foreigners, entering Russia, and is applicable to "all foreigners, of whatsoever nationality," but intimates no restriction on travel or sojourn in Russia by reason of race or faith. This ordinance was modified and amplified by the ukase of 25th February, 1817, but still without any manner of religious proscription or restriction.

From this time down to 1860, I can find no trace of the enforcement, especially against American citizens, of the restrictions against Jewish travel or residence which are stated to have existed when our treaty with Russia was signed. . . . .

To bar an American citizen whose rights might be so concerned from personal appearance in protection of those rights might be a distinct departure from the engagement of the treaty, while to suppose that his case might come under the discretional authority of the police or the military power, which might refuse his personal sojourn in any part of the empire, or allow it under conditions depending on their good will, is to suppose a submission of the guarantees of the treaty to a tribunal never contemplated by its framers.

I cannot better bring this instruction to a close than by repeating and amplifying those views which the President so firmly holds and which he so anxiously desires to have recognized and responded to by the Russian Government.

He conceives that the intention of the United States in negotiating and concluding the treaty of December 18, 1832, and the distinct and enlightened reciprocal engagements then entered into with the Government of Russia, give us a moral ground to expect careful attention to our opinions as to its rational interpretation in the broadest and most impartial sense; that he would deeply regret, in view of the gratifying friendliness of the relations of the two countries which he is so desirous to maintain, to find that this large national sentiment fails to control the present issue, or that a narrow and rigid limitation of the construction possible to the treaty stipulations between the two countries is likely to be adhered to: that if, after a frank comparison of the views of the two governments, in the most amicable spirit and with the most earnest desire to reach a mutually agreeable conclusion, the treaty stipulations between the United States and Russia are found insufficient to determine questions of nationality and tolerance of individual faith, or to secure to American citizens in Russia the treatment which Russians receive in the United States, it is simply due to the good relations of the two countries that these stipulations should be made sufficient in these regards: and that we can look for no clearer evidence of the good will which Russia professes toward us than a frank declaration of her readiness to come to a distinct agreement with us on these points, in an earnest and generous spirit. . . . .

You can further advise him that we can make no new treaty with Russia, nor accept any construction of our existing treaty, which shall discriminate against any class of American citizens on account of their religious faith.

I cannot but feel assured that this earnest presentation of the views of this government will accord with the sense of justice and equity of that of Russia, and that the questions at issue will soon find their natural solution in harmony with the spirit of tolerance which pervaded the ukase of the Empress Catherine a century ago, and with the statesman-like declaration of the principle of reciprocity found in the later decree of the Czar Alexander II, in 1860.

On September 7, 1886, a new case having arisen, Mr. Lothrop sent a dispatch to Mr. Bayard, from which the following extracts are made:

Every effort seems to have been made to induce the Imperial authorities to modify its laws in favor of our citizens, but, wholly without success. There is now no probability of any such modification. Indeed, there seems now to be a revival of strict-ness in enforcing this restriction. Strict orders have been issued to Russian officials abroad not to visa the passports of any persons recognized as foreign Jews. The object is to turn all such persons back at the frontier, and thus prevent their entering the empire. If, however, any get through, their passports are subjected to renewed scrutiny in all large cities, and if they are recognized they are ordered forthwith to leave. The papers an nounce that only a few days ago two English Jews, one of them a member of Parliament, were peremptorily expelled at Moscow.

On August 29, a most respectable Hebrew merchant of New York, a native-born citizen of the United States, who was travelling in Russia as a tourist with his family, was waited on at his hotel in this city by the police, his passport returned to him, and he was ordered to leave the city that night. He came to me immediately, and I at once not only went to the foreign office, but filed a protest in writing against this order, and asked its revocation. My explanation of this gentleman's character and the purpose of his visit was very readily accepted and the order of expulsion revoked. . . . .

.... The Imperial Government defends its position on the ground that every country must have full liberty to determine who shall have the right to enter and dwell in its territory..... It is not pretended that American citizens of the Hebrew faith have ever at any time proved dangerous to the peace or safety of the Empire. But it is urged that discrimination between nationalities is inadmissible, and that the harshness of the general rule is mitigated by special permission given in all proper cases upon special application.

I believe that the Russian officials are disposed to be obliging in this respect, but it can never be acceptable that any body of American citizens should be subject to any such necessity. It seems to be an imputation on that which is justly held most sacred. Still, as there is not the slightest inclination to abrogate, or even modify the law, it may be desirable that the facts be more fully known in America.

Much annoyance and mortification would be saved if our Hebrew fellow-citizens desiring to come to Russia should apply for special leave. Letters of introduction to the legation would be most useful in promoting such application. Permission could doubtless be obtained in all ordinary cases.

Mr. Bayard, replying under date of September 23, 1886, wrote as follows:

The Government of the Czar is fully aware that we do not admit the principle of discriminating against any American citizens because of their religious tenets.

Another case arose in 1893, and the Department of State wrote to Mr. White as follows:

It is not constitutionally within the power of this Government, or of any of its authorities, to apply a religious test in qualification of the equal rights of all citizens of the United States; and it is therefore impossible to acquiesce in the application of such a test, within the jurisdiction of the United States, by the agents of a foreign power, to the impairment of a right of any American citizen or in derogation of the certificate of this Government to the fact of such citizenship.

On several occasions in the past this Government has made temperate but earnest remonstrance against the examination into the religious faith of American citizens by the Russian authorities. . . . .

His Majesty's Government, however, surely cannot expect the United States to acquiesce in the assumption of a religious inquisitorial function within our own borders, by a foreign agency, in a manner so repugnant to the national sense.

I cannot but surmise that some strange misapprehension exists in this regard in the mind of His Majesty's Government, which your accustomed ability and tact may explain and perhaps remove.

In 1895, Mr. Breckinridge, our Minister at St. Petersburg, wrote to the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs as follows:

I am directed by my Government to bring to the attention of the Imperial Government the refusal of the Russian consul of New York to visé passports issued by the United States to its citizens if they are of the Jewish faith.

As your excellency is aware it has long been a matter of deep regret and concern to the United States that any of its citizens should be discriminated against for religious reasons while peacefully sojourning in this country, or that any such restraint should be imposed upon their coming and going. Painful as this policy toward a class of our citizens is to my Government, repugnant to our constitutional duty to afford them in every possible way equal protection and privileges and to our sense of their treaty rights, yet it is even more repugnant to our laws and the national sense for a foreign official, located within the jurisdiction of the United States, to there apply a religious test to any of our citizens to the impairment of his rights as an American citizen or in derogation of the certificate of our Government to the fact of such citizenship.

It is not constitutionally within the power of the United States Government, or of any of its authorities, to apply a religious test in qualification of equal rights of all citizens of the United States, and no law or principle is more warmly cherished by the American people. It is therefore impossible for my Government to acquiesce in any manner in the application of such a test within its jurisdiction by the agents of a foreign power.

When this matter was the subject of correspondence between my Government and the Imperial representative at Washington, as shown by Prince Cantacuzene's note of February 20, 1893, such action by the Russian consul at New York was shown to be

"according to the instructions of his Government."

I can sincerely assure you that the continuation of this practice is as embarrassing as it is painful to my Government, especially when it is on the part of a nation for whose Government and people such intimate friendship has so long been manifested by the United States. I am happy that in this spirit I can frankly submit the matter to your excellency with the sincere hope that assurance can be given that such practices will be henceforth interdicted on the part of Russian officials located within the furisdiction of the United States.

Mr. Peirce, writing to the State Department on June 13, 1895, reported a conversation with the Russian Minister of Foreign Affairs, from which the following extracts are made:

That viewing the Jewish question as she (Russia) does, as one of race and not of religion, but in which the two questions are inseparable, so far as her purposes are concerned, she refuses to permit foreign Jews of any nationality to enter her borders and swell the numbers already there. For this reason the Government has instructed all Russian consuls in all countries to refuse to visé the passports of foreign Jews. On the other hand, and speaking of his own opinion, as the real purpose of the laws forbidding the entry of foreign Jews into Russia is to prevent their settlement here and their engaging in trade within Russian territory, and not to prevent the entrance of tourists, temporary sojourners, or Jews whose purpose in coming is not of an objectionable nature to the Government, Baron Osten-Sacken said that, in his opinion, there should be a change in the present practice regarding the admission of foreign Jews.

I expressed the hope that the Imperial Government would find it compatible with its policy to admit American citizens into Russia, without inquiry as to their religious opinions or race, upon presentation of their passports. That with us the Hebrews had proved themselves to be good and law-abiding citizens, who prospered without preying upon others, but that whatever might be the opinion of the Imperial Government upon this question, the interpretation and application of the Federal Laws discourage citizens of the United States of all creeds, taking up permanent residence in a foreign country and continuing to claim the protection of our Government as such citizens; that such citizenship involves certain opligations which require a residence in our country, and that therefore it is unlikely that Hebrews bearing American passports would become permanently settled in Russia. This Baron Osten-Sacken admitted was a forcible argument, and he expressed himself as hopeful that it would be possible to bring about a satisfactory revision of Russian practice as regards the admission of American Jews into the Empire.

At the same time, he said that were an answer to Mr. Breck-inridge's note demanded the reply could not be favorable. That the laws of Russia are framed with regard to her own views of her own good. I took occasion to point out to the Baron that the purport of Mr. Breckinridge's note was to protest against the extra-territorial act of an agent of a foreign Government, upon our soil, applying a religious test to citizens of the United States, an act not constitutionally within the power of any officer of our own government to perform, and not to criticise the Russian Laws.

On July 5, 1895, Mr. Adee, writing to the Legation at St. Petersburg, said:

Your conclusion that it is inexpedient to press the complaint to a formal answer at present appears to be discreet, but the Department must express its deep regret that you have encountered in the foreign office a reluctance to consider the matter in the light in which this Government has presented it. The Russian Government can not expect that its course in asserting inquisitorial authority in the United States over citizens of the United States as to their religious or civil status can ever be acceptable or even tolerable to such a Government as ours, and continuance in such a course after our views have been clearly but considerately made known may trench upon the just limits of consideration.

This dispatch is illustrated by a letter to the Russian Consulate General at New York from an American citizen asking permission to visit Russia. Upon his declaration that he was a Jew, he received a reply to the effect that he must secure permission to visit Russia from the Ministry of the Interior.

Under date of July 4, 1895, in course of a long dispatch, Mr. Breckinridge wrote to Mr. Olney as follows:

The first and chief difficulty so far experienced has been to get the Russian Government to consider this question separately and simply as it is presented by the United States apart from any collateral question.

As the record shows, former discussion has largely involved the general Jewish question, particularly as presented by the internal policy of Russia. So long as an ulterior purpose of this character is in any degree suspected, the Russian Government will consider that to be the real issue it has to meet, and it will politicly but consistently refuse to amend its ways.

The next difficulty has been to secure a due apprehension of the real nature and importance of the matter, even after it has been separately considered. It is quite difficult for Russians to consider it as more than an administrative regulation pitted against their regulations, changeable at the will of some high official, and meant only to serve purposes of convenience.

I have politely but consistently refused to enter into any discussion in this connection except under the precise proposition submitted by the Department, and I have iterated and reiterated that proposition, to the exclusion of all others, as clearly and as pointedly, as I could.

On August 22, 1895, Mr. Adee wrote to Mr. Breckinridge as follows:

Apart from the constitutional objections to the discrimination made by Russian consular officers against American Jews, this Government can never consent that a class embracing many of its most honored and valuable citizens shall, within its own territory, be subjected to invidious and disparaging distinctions of the character implied in refusing to visé their passports. For, notwithstanding Prince Lobanow's suggestion that his Government's consular regulation upon the subject under consideration does not apply to all Israelites and therefore can not be regarded as a discrimination against them on religious grounds, the fact remains that the interrogatories propounded to applicants for the consular visé relate to religious faith, and upon the response depends the consul's action.

Viewed in the light of an invidious discrimination tending to discredit and humiliate American Jews in the eyes of their fellow-citizens, it is plain that the action of Russian consular officers does produce its effect within American territory, and not exclusively in Russian jurisdiction.

But the Russian discrimination against American Jews is not confined simply to the matter of viséing passports. This Department was informed a few years since by the Russian minister here that Russian consuls in this country would refuse authentication to legal documents for use in Russia when Jews are ascertained to be interested. This is not merely an unjust and invidious discrimination against Jews, but would seem to be plainly a violation of the spirit of Article X of the treaty of 1832 between this country and Russia in respect to the property rights of American citizens in that country.

In a dispatch dated October 23, 1895, from the Department of State to the Legation at St. Petersburg, after acknowledging the receipt of a set of regulations relating to the Jews in Russia, the document continues:

This does not touch the essential question to which the Department's previous instructions have invited attention, namely, the assumption by the agents of Russia in the United States of Inquisitorial functions touching the religious faith of applicants for passports. If anything, it presents the subject in a still more unfavorable light, for it seems that those Russian agents in a foreign territory may in their discretion inquire into the business standing of the principal of the commercial house employing a Hebrew agent, and act favorably or unfavorably, according to their own judgment of its importance.

The question is not whether the Russian Government by Imperial order or ministerial regulation has directed its consuls to make such inquiries in respect to the religious faith or business transactions of American citizens, but whether the Imperial Government has any right to make such inquisition in a foreign country when the effect may be to disregard the Government's certification of the fact of citizenship; or, assuming for the argument's sake, but not by way of admission, that such a right may technically exist, the question remains whether the assumption to exercise it in face of the temperate but earnest remonstrances of this Government against foreign interference with the private concerns of its citizens, is in accordance with those courteous principles of comity which this Government is so anxious to observe in its relations with all foreign states.

These are but examples of the numerous dispatches interchanged between the United States and Russia during the past forty years, upon this subject. That the result thus far has been unsatisfactory to our Government appears from the circular issued to naturalized American citizens born in Russia, who desire to obtain passports, and from the following:

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, August 1, 1901.

NOTICE TO AMERICAN CITIZENS FORMERLY SUBJECTS OF RUSSIA WHO CONTEMPLATE RETURNING TO THAT COUNTRY

The information given below is believed to be correct, yet is not to be considered as official, as it relates to the laws and regulations of a foreign country.

A Russian is enrolled for military service at the beginning of the twenty-first year of his age, and remains on the rolls to the end of his forty-third year; but at the age of 15 he is considered to be among those who are liable to perform military service, and he can not, after reaching that age, ask for permission to become a citizen of a foreign country, unless he has performed his military service. A Russian who becomes a citizen of a foreign country without Imperial consent is liable under Russian law to the loss of all his civil rights and to perpetual banishment from the Empire. If he returns he is liable to deportation to Siberia. When a Russian emigrates before he is 15 years old, and subsequently becomes a citizen of another country, he is equally liable to punishment, unless when he attained the age of 21 years he took steps necessary to obtain the consent of the Emperor to his expatriation.

Naturalized Americans of Russian birth, of the Jewish race, are not allowed to enter Russia except by special permission. For this, they may apply to the minister of the interior, but the Department can not act as intermediary in making the application.

There is no treaty between the United States and Russia defining the status of American citizens of Russian birth upon their return to Russia.

No one is admitted to Russia without a passport. It must be visaed by a Russian diplomatic or consular representative. Upon entering Russia it should be shown at the first Government house, and the holder will be given another passport or permit of sojourn. At least twenty-four hours before departure from Russia this permit should be presented and a passport of departure will be granted and the original passport returned. A fresh permit to remain in Russia must be obtained every six months.

Within the past two years the subject has attracted attention in Congress.

On March 28, 1902, the Honorable Henry M. Goldfogle, representing the Ninth District of New York in the Congress of the United States, submitted to the House of Representatives the following resolution:

Resolved, by the House of Representatives of the United States, That the Secretary of State be, and he hereby is, respectfully requested to inform this House whether American citizens of the Jewish religious faith, holding passports issued by this Government, are barred or excluded from entering the territory of the Empire of Russia, and whether the Russian Government has made or is making any discrimination between citizens of the United States of different religious faiths or persuasions, visiting or attempting to visit Russia, provided with American passports; and whether the Russian Government has made regulations restricting or specially applying to American citizens, whether native or naturalized, of the Jewish religious denomination holding United States passports, and if so, to report the facts in relation thereto, and what action concerning such exclusion, discrimination, or restriction, if any, has been taken by any Department of the Government of the United States.

This resolution was referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs and ordered to be printed. On April 30, 1902, the Committee made the following report:

The Committee on Foreign Affairs, to whom was referred House resolution 183, calling upon the Secretary of State to inform the House of Representatives whether the Russian Government is discriminating against Americans of Jewish faith visiting or attempting to visit Russia, have duly considered the same, and report it back to the House with the following amendment:

In line 3, after the word "Representatives," insert the words "if not incompatible with public interests."

As amended the Committee recommends the adoption of the resolution.

The amendment was agreed to. Before the resolution as amended was voted upon, Mr. Goldfogle spoke to it at length. The resolution was adopted.

On May 5, 1902, the following letter from the Secretary of State responding to the above inquiry was received by the House of Representatives, referred to the Committee on Foreign Affairs, and ordered to be printed:

To the House of Representatives: In response to the resolution of the House of Representatives, of April 30, 1902, the undersigned Secretary of State has the honor to say that the resolution involves two questions:

(1) Whether American Jews holding American passports are, as a fact, excluded from Russia, and

(2) Whether American Jews are discriminated against by Russia, and are at a greater disadvantage before that Government than are the Jews of other countries.

The second question may be categorically answered in the negative. Such a discrimination, if it were made, would call forth immediate action of protest from this Government.

This Department has no information remotely indicating that American Jews stand upon a footing different from that occupied by the Jews of other countries in the administration of Russian law.

The exclusion of naturalized citizens of Russian origin and of Jews from Russia was commented upon by Secretary Olney in his report to the President for the year 1896:

"The published correspondence for a number of years back has shown the persistence of the United States in endeavoring to obtain for its citizens, whether native or naturalized, and irrespective of their faith, the equality of privilege and treatment stipulated for all American citizens in Russia by existing treaties. Holding to the old doctrine of perpetual allegiance; refusing to lessen its authority by concluding any treaty recognizing the naturalization of a Russian subject without prior imperial consent; asserting the extreme right to punish a naturalized Russian on return to his native jurisdiction, not merely for unauthorized emigration, but also specifically for the unpermitted acquisition of a foreign citizenship, and sedulously applying at home and through the official acts of its agents abroad, to all persons of the Jewish belief, the stern restrictions enjoined by Russian law, the Government of Russia takes ground not admitting of acquiescence by the United States, because at variance with the character of our institutions, the sentiments of our people, the provisions of our statutes, and the tendencies of modern international comity.

Under these circumstances conflict between national laws, each absolute within the domestic sphere and inoperative beyond it, is hardly to be averted."

Since this report the position of the Department has not changed, and its efforts to secure uniform treatment for American citizens in Russia, begun many years ago, have continued, although they have not been attended with encouraging success.

The Department of State now sends to all persons of Russian birth who receive passports an unofficial notice showing what are the provisions of Russian law liable to affect them, in order that they may not incur danger/through ignorance. In transmitting a copy of this notice to the ambassador of the United States at St. Petersburg, for his information, he was instructed February 15,

1901, as follows:

"The inclosed notice to American citizens formerly subjects of Russia who contemplate returning to that country the Department is sending to all persons born in Russia who receive passports. It is sent to you merely for your information and you are instructed that it is not intended to mean that there has been any abatement on the part of this Government in its policy of protecting equally naturalized and native-born Americans during their travels or sojourn abroad, as the law requires. Nor does the notice foreshadow any mitigation of such dissent as this Government may have expressed to the laws or regulations of Russia which may deny equality of treatment to all law-abiding American citizens, regardless of their place of birth."

Respectfully submitted.

JOHN HAY.

DEPARTMENT OF STATE, Washington, May 2, 1902.

There the matter rested until, on January 4, 1904, Mr. Goldfogle introduced a second resolution:

Resolved, That it is the sense of the people of the United States that uniform treatment and protection should be accorded to every American citizen, regardless of race or creed, when travelling or sojourning abroad, and that every earnest effort should be made by the executive department of this Government to secure from the Imperial Government of Russia such uniformity of treatment and protection, especially in the recognition and honoring of the passports held by our citizens, to the end that there be no discrimination made by the Government of Russia between American citizens on the ground of their religious belief or faith; and the President of the United States is hereby respectfully requested to take such steps and cause such diplomatic negotiations to be set on foot as may tend to secure, through means of treaty or otherwise, the honoring and the uniform recognition by the Russian Government and its authorities of American passports, irrespective of the religious faith or denomination of their holders to the end that every law-abiding citizen provided with a passport duly issued by this Government shall, regardless of what may be his race, creed, or religious faith, have freedom in travelling and sojourn in the territory of Russia, subject to such provisions in any treaty between the United States and Russia as are not inconsistent with the spirit and intent of this resolution.

This resolution gave rise to notable addresses in the House of Representatives by the Honorable Francis Burton Harrison, of New York, the Honorable Henry M. Goldfogle, of New York, the Honorable Martin Emerich, of Illinois, and the Honorable Alfred Lucking, of Michigan.

On February 18, 1904, the House Committee on Foreign Affairs granted a hearing to Mr. Goldfogle, Mr. Harrison, and the Honorable Simon Wolf, on the resolution introduced by Mr. Goldfogle concerning the treatment of Americans abroad.

On April 14, the House Committee on Foreign Affairs submitted a favorable report on the following substitute for the Goldfogle resolution, which was unanimously adopted on April 21:

That the President be requested to renew negotiations with the Governments of countries where discrimination is made between American citizens on the ground of religious faith or belief, to secure, by treaty or otherwise, uniformity of treatment and protection to American citizens holding passports duly issued by the authorities of the United States, in order that all American citizens shall have guaranteed freedom of travel and sojourn in those countries without regard to race, creed or religious faith.

In conformity with this action taken by the House of Representatives, the Department of State has again formally opened the passport question. At the date of writing no reply has been received from Russia, and the American dispatch is as yet unpublished.

That the diplomatic correspondence of many years and the campaign carried on in the House of Representatives more recently has not been without result, is evident from the "planks" adopted by the two great political parties. American citizens are thus irrevocably committed to the inviolability of the American passport. With the Jewish citizens of the United States the settlement of the question has become a passion, and they will not rest content until the rights of American citizenship are recognized by all nations who desire to maintain friendly relations with this Government, and until the absolute equality of all American citizens regardless of race or creed is fully and finally admitted.

JEWISH STATISTICS

The statistics of Jews in the world rests largely upon estimates. In Russia, Austria-Hungary, Germany, and a few other countries, official figures are obtainable. In the main, however, the numbers given are based upon estimates repeated and added to by one statistical authority after another. In spite of the unsatisfactoriness of the method, it may be assumed that the numbers given are approximately correct.

For the statistics given below various authorities have been consulted, among them the "Statesman's Year Book" for 1904, the English "Jewish Year Book" for 5664, the "Jewish Encyclopedia," and the Alliance Israélite Universelle reports. Some of the statements rest upon the authority of competent individuals. A comparison with last year's statistics will show that for several countries the figures have been changed. In most of the cases, the change is due to the fact that the results of the census of 1900 and 1901 have only now become available.

THE UNITED STATES

As the census of the United States has, in accordance with the spirit of American institutions, taken no heed of the religious convictions of American citizens, whether native-born or naturalized, all statements concerning the number of Jews living in this country are based upon estimate, though several of the estimates have been most conscientiously made.

The Jewish population was estimated

In 1818 by	Mordecai M. Noah at	3,000
In 1824 by	Solomon Etting at	6,000
In 1826 by	Isaac C. Harby at	6,000

In 1888 by	Isaac Markens at	400,000
In 1897 by 1	David Sulzberger at	937,800

The following table by States is a modification of that given in the AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK for 5664, by reason of changes in the estimated populations of Georgia, the Hawaiian Islands, Illinois, and New York. For the first three the new figures have been adopted from "The Jewish Encyclopedia."

The total Jewish immigration to the United States, through the ports of New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore, from 1881 to July 1, 1904, is stated to have been 827,424, although it is by no means certain that this number does not include Christians from Russia and Austria. The immigration at the same ports from July 1, 1903, to June 30, 1904, was as follows:

THE HUNDRED BEST AVAILABLE BOOKS IN ENGLISH ON JEWISH SUBJECTS

Inquiries are often made as to suitable books in English for the nucleus of a library of Judaica, and it occurred to the Editors of this Year Book to have a list drawn up to which persons making such inquiries could be referred, and the following is the result. The limitations under which such a list can be compiled are rather numerous. In the first place books have to be available; that is, in print, and purchasable at reasonable prices, and many valuable books are no longer current on the publishers' shelves: Deutsch's "Literary Remains," and Franzos's "Jews of Barnow" may be mentioned as two prominent examples. Then, again, the books have to be readable, and not mere works of reference. Young's "Concordance to the Bible" is perhaps as useful a book for Jewish students as one could mention, but from the present point of view it cannot be regarded as a book at all. So much for omissions which will doubtless be observed by a keen-eyed critic.

On the other hand, many books find a place in the list because, though not of very great value themselves, they happen to be the only ones available for the particular purpose in view. A book may not be good and yet be the best. The need of filling out a round hundred has also caused several books to gain an entry which might otherwise not have received that honor. No sermons are included.

As the list is comparatively small it is arranged alphabetically. No man's classification ever satisfies any other man, and to insure a book being readily found in a classified list it has often to be inserted under two or more rubrics. It is, of course, assumed that the Jewish reader will have a Bible in the Leeser version, and one would wish that one could assume that the reader also possessed that most valuable and interesting supplement to the Bible known as the Apocrypha, and recording the spiritual experiences of Israel between the Bible and the Talmud. The short annotations on the various books are intended as merely hints and warnings and have necessarily been put in a somewhat dogmatic form.

Besides books in the proper sense of the word there are periodical collections and publications which often contain interesting matter and information, such as the Publications of the American Jewish Historical Society and the Jewish Historical Society of England, The Jewish Quarterly Review, The Year Book of the Conference of American Jewish Rabbis. The Jewish Literary Annual; while much information is contained in the Jewish Year Book of London and the AMERICAN JEWISH YEAR BOOK. Above all, "as in private duty bound," there is the Jewish Encyclopedia, from which information full and accurate can be obtained on all matters Jewish. With the following books as a nucleus, supplemented by some of the series just mentioned, and a couple of good Jewish newspapers, a foundation would soon be made for a Jewish library for home or Sunday School, or for a Jewish section of a free public library. The theory was based on two denials—that writing was used for literary purposes in the fime of Moses, and that a legal code was possible before the period of the Jewish kings. The discovery of the Tel el-Amarna tablets disproved the first assumption; the discovery of the code of Khammu-rabl has disproved the second"); the Geography of the Pentafeuch; Hebrew and Babylonian Cosmology; the doctrine of Religious Evolution.

The Fall-Story and its Exegesis (Genesis III); the Ethnological origin and relations of the Fall-Story; the Psychological origin of the Fall-Story; and relations of the Fall-Story; the Psychological origin of the Fall-Story; its relation to History, Allegory, and Myth; the preparation in the Old Testament for a doctrine of the Fall and of Original Sin; the teaching of Ecclesiasticus on Sin and the Fall in the preparation for the doctrine of the Fall in Alexandrian Judaism; the Fall and Original Sin in Rabbinical literature; the Fall and Original Sin in Jewish Pseudepigraphic literature; the growth of the doctrine of the Fall, and of its elements. In Jewish literature as a whole; St. Paul's doctrine of the Fall; the doctrines of the Fall and Original Sin in the Fathers before Augustine. As to the Rabbinic doctrine, the writer concludes that "No diminished freedom of will, no permanent ascendancy of the yeser hara established for all generations, were ascribed to the first transgression;" but, on the other hand, with special reference to IV Ezra, "It is unfair to suppose that religious inwardness was necessarily lacking to a non-Christian Jew; and it is certainly an exaggeration to assert, as has frequently been represented, that Judaism possessed no doctrine of Original Sin."

J. W. THIRTLE. The Titles of the Psalms (London and New York, Macmillan, 1904).

Maintains that the musical headings of the Psalms have been misplaced; they belong to the previous Psalm. The theory bases itself on the third chapter of Habakkuk, which begins: "A Prayer of Habakkuk the prophet, set to Shigionoth," and ends: "For the Chief Musician, on my stringed instruments." Thus the author contends that TYPE always marks the end, not the beginning of a Psalm.

"And the result of my labour has at least brought me its own reward by conferring emancipation from the fetters of all the creeds, and unshakable confidence in the Power, the Wisdom, and the Beneficence which pervade and rule the Universe." Holds that "the Unknown God" will not always remain "unknowable."

Growth of monarchy followed by its weakening; Jerusalem becomes a constitutional state with the law above the King. Before the aristocracy succeed in expelling the monarch the city is destroyed; but after return from Exile there is no restoration of the monarchy. In the sphere of morals we begin with tribal ethics, where sin is wrong against a fellow-clansman; we end with religious individualism—sin is a violation of the law, which the self-revealing Creator has written on the heart of man. An original book.

"THE VOICE OF AMERICA ON KISHINEFF"

ADDITIONS AND CORRECTIONS

The Editor of "The Voice of America on Kishineff" is desirous of making a few additions and corrections that have been called to his attention since the publication of the book.

GALESBURG, ILLINOIS

On p. 89, under Galesburg, Illinois, it is reported that Mayor George Shumway issued an appeal for a public meeting. The copy of the appeal and the account of the meeting given below came to hand too late for publication:

Not only the Jewish people but the civilized world stands aghast at the horrors of Kishineff. Such barbarism should not be allowed to go unheeded by civilized nations.

Therefore let all the good people of Galesburg, Illinois, unite in condemning these atrocities, and in generously responding to the pitiful cry for help which comes to us from across the sea.

All are earnestly invited to meet for action at the Mayor's Office this evening at 8 o'clock, May 20, 1903.

GEORGE SHUMWAY, Mayor.

A large number of the prominent citizens attended this meeting, and it was determined to hold a public mass meeting, and after speeches were made by Mayor Shumway, Honorable Mack J. Mack, Frank J. Sisson, of the Daily Mail, and George Perry, of the Daily Republican Register, the committee appointed for that purpose reported the following resolutions:

WHEREAS, At a meeting of citizens held on the evening of May 20, 1903, the undersigned were appointed a committee to arrange for a mass meeting to protest against the horrible brutalities perpetrated upon the Jews of Kishineff, Russia; and

WHEREAS, It is thought best to hold a public mass meeting to arouse sentiment against such outrages and to protest in the name of humanity against this wave of fanaticism which seems to be sweeping across the far-away Eastern countries;

Therefore, Acting in accordance with instructions heretofore given, a public mass meeting of men and women is hereby called for Sunday afternoon, at 3 o'clock, in the Y. M. C. A. Hall, and all are earnestly urged to come.

GEORGE SHUMWAY, CHAS. H. MAY, GEORGE PEREY, HENRY EMRICH, J. W. COLLINS, HENRY SMALLEY, S. SPEAR, Committee.

PORTLAND, OREGON

Among the numerous newspaper clippings examined by the Editor, several referred to the large sum of money collected for the Kishineff sufferers in Portland, Oregon, but it happened that none referred to the meeting held there, in the Synagogue of the Congregation Talmud Torah, on Sunday, May 17, 1903, at which the principal speakers were Ben Selling, Rabbi N. M. Mosessohn, D. Solis Cohen, Judge John T. Caples, and Rabbi S. S. Wise.

ST. LOUIS, MISSOURI

On p. 187, an account is given of the meeting held in St. Louis, Mo., at Shaare Emeth Temple, on May 24, 1903, under the auspices of the Young Men's Hebrew Association. By a clerical error the name of one of the speakers is omitted, that of the Reverend Doctor Samuel Sale, in whose synagogue the meeting took place, and also the name of Rabbi H. J. Messing, who delivered the opening prayer.

The Editor takes this opportunity to give publicity to the report of the Committee in charge of the Kishineff Relief Fund, which ended its labors January 25, 1904. The report was published in July, 1904. It states that 1,010,343.30 roubles came in to Kishineff from 728 towns, 663 of which are in Russia. The following account is given of the money:

533,573.35 roubles distributed among the plundered.

100,200.00 roubles distributed among orphans.

156,071.86 roubles distributed among merchants.

15,390.00 roubles distributed among emigrants.

13,056.94 roubles spent for food and clothing.

3,041.00 roubles spent for medical assistance.

23,057.00 roubles for a soup kitchen.

581.03 roubles for the burial of the mutilated Torah Scrolls.

4,041.00 roubles for Relief Committees' expenses.

14,700.00 roubles for legal expenses.

16,748.24 roubles spent in repairing public and private buildings.

50,000.00 roubles given to the Jewish Colonization Association to found a Jewish colony in Bessarabia.

50,000.00 roubles set aside to found a colony in Palestine for 50 Kishineff families.

After the payment of unclassified items the balance, 11,-035.88, was handed over to the representatives of the local Jewish community to assist special cases.

CYRUS ADLER,

Editor.

MEETING OF THE SIXTEENTH YEAR

The meeting of the Jewish Publication Society of America was held Wednesday afternoon, May 22, 1904, in the Assembly Hall of the Keneseth Israel Temple, Broad Street above Columbia Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa.

The President of the Society, Mr. Edwin Wolf, called the meeting to order.

Prayer was offered by the Rev. Dr. David Davidson, of New York City.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

The President delivered the following address:

The Jewish Publication Society of America can point to various achievements this year.

First is the publication of the first instalment of the new English Bible translation. Our Book of Psalms, in a dainty leather binding clearly printed, is not only an attractive production in the mechanical make-up, but—what is of more importance—it is a product of the highest scholarship, both as to literalness of translation and as to style. It is a volume symbolic of the culture of the twentieth century Jew of America, a valuable stone in the monument of learning the Jewish people of the United States are rearing for themselves.

Our second achievement is the publication of two volumes in relation to the Kishineff affair. Last year's meeting directed the publication and distribution of material bearing upon the condition of the Jews in Russia. We accordingly arranged with the publishers for the publication of a special edition of "Within the Pale." The author of the volume, Michael Davitt, being a trained non-Jewish writer, his strong impartial story of Kishineff has been effective in helping to form an unprejudiced opinion of the Russian atrocities.

The other volume is "The Voice of America on Kishineff," edited by Dr. Cyrus Adler. A resumé of the discourses, the resolutions, and the editorials, by Jews and non-Jews throughout the country, expressive of the feelings and the opinions of Americans on the barbarian acts of Russians against their townsmen, this volume will stand in the history of civilization as a record of the sympathetic, humanitarian attitude of Americans toward the Jews.

Owing to the fact that a special Kishineff Fund was available, we were enabled to give both volumes wider publicity than is the case with our ordinary publications.

In addition to the three books referred to, we issued the Year Book, the first of the fiscal year's publications, and "In Assyrian Tents," a juvenile story, the last of the year's books.

This makes altogether fifty-one separate volumes during the history of the society. We have distributed upwards of 225,000 copies of our various works.

An achievement which we are confident will strengthen our work on its administrative side is the formation of the New York Committee, with Mr. Cyrus L. Sulzberger as Chairman. This committee has established an office on the East Side of New York City and organized an auxiliary Society there. Much interest has been shown in the quarters in which the committee has made propaganda, and it is expected that eventually there will be a material increase of membership as a result of the efforts of this committee. New York, with its large Jewish population, should contribute a very large proportionate number of the membership of this society.

Our membership has not varied much in recent years. It still remains about five thousand. Additions have come chiefly through our representative, Mrs. K. H. Scherman. During the fall and winter she made a trip through the Southern States, and the results of her canvass show themselves in an increased membership in that section of the country. As, however, there are losses by death and resignations our total number of members is not much larger than before.

We have been helped financially through special contributions to the Kishineff Fund, and I most heartily thank the several contributors.

It is my sad province to speak of a learned man whose death was a loss to the community in general, but particularly to us. Since the Society was formed Dr. Jastrow was a member of its Publication Committee, and in his later years he devoted himself largely to the most important work which the Publication Society has ever attempted—a translation of the Bible. For this task, a life of study had fitted Dr. Jastrow, and it will be a most difficult matter to replace him as Editor of the Bible Translation.

The death of Mr. Simon A. Stern has removed one whom the community delighted to honor because he so signally brought honor to it. For years he, too, had been a member of our Publication Committee, ever since the Society was organized, and all those who know how helpful his broad ideas were, will appreciate the loss which the Society has suffered.

And we have to mourn still another who, almost since the beginning of its existence, had served the Society, as treasurer, director, and then as second vice-president, Mr. Herman Friedman, whose sudden death was a matter of deep regret to the Society.

With these losses, we can refer to at least one gain among our governing committees and officers. Dr. Solomon Schechter, president of the faculty of the Jewish Theological Seminary, was chosen a member of the Publication Committee to succeed Dr. Jastrow.

Mr. Morris Dannenbaum, who served the Society as treasurer for some years, declining re-election, we chose Mr. Herman Fernberger for the office.

I thank the officers and members of committees for helping me in the management of the society.

Year after year the Society is increasing the number and variety of publications on Jewish subjects in the English language. Year after year the number and variety from other sources are increasing. The Jewish Publication Society and the Jewish Encyclopedia are supplying material for Jewish study; students of Jewish subjects are applying themselves to the study of books in English; Jewish societies are promoting a knowledge of Jewish problems. We are laying the foundation for a Jewish renaissance in America.

With some degree of confidence I ask your continued and increasing help for our work. For centuries the enemies of Judaism have been presenting their side to the public. The aim of the Publication Society is to bring before that generally impartial judge the Jewish standpoint; to teach it our history, our philosophy, our ideals, and in teaching, better to learn them ourselves. Is there any better way by which to change the prejudice and misunderstanding which arises from ignorance than by the sympathy and appreciation which knowledge of what we have done and thought, and of what we are doing and thinking would create?

I, therefore, hope the Jews of the United States will more and more realize the great work this Society is doing. The greater the number that join our ranks, the greater the interest shown in our purpose, the more powerful becomes our influence in furnishing information on Jewish subjects, in stimulating a study of Jewish problems, and in moulding public opinion. I appeal, therefore, to Jews throughout the land to help us make this organization strong in members, so that it may be strong in its effect on Jewish development, that it may go from "strength to strength."

Mrs. K. H. Scherman, our representative, has canvassed for members during the past year chiefly in the Southern States.

THE FISCAL YEAR

In view of the requirement to hold the annual meeting in May, it has been decided to begin the fiscal year hereafter on May 1st, instead of June 1st, so that all reports and accounts may be concluded on the former date. Heretofore there has been a lack of uniformity as to the dates on which accounts were closed for report to the annual meeting.

NEW YORK COMMITTEE

The formation of a New York Committee, with Cyrus L. Sulzberger as Chairman, will be most helpful in promoting the influence of the Society. The Committee has formed an auxiliary society and opened an office on the East Side, and has planned other means for stimulating greater interest in the Society, to the end that a larger membership shall be obtained. A number of canvassers have recently been employed for the purpose of securing members in New York City.

PUBLICATIONS

The Publications of the past year have been as follows:

American Jewish Year Book, 5664 (1903-1904), edited by Cyrus Adler.

Within the Pale, by Michael Davitt.

The Book of Psalms.

The Voice of America on Kishineff, edited by Cyrus Adler.

In Assyrian Tents—The Story of the Strange Adventures of Uriel, by Louis Pendleton.

THE BIBLE

The Book of Psalms is the first instalment of the new English translation of the Bible. It has been received with such éclat as to give encouragement to the great work which the Society has planned in translating the Bible into English according to the latest Jewish scholarship.

Attention is called to the fact that the sum of $213.31 is all that remains unexpended of the money contributed to the Bible Fund. Additional contributions must be received to insure the continuance of the work.

KISHINEFF FUND

Two of the publications of the year were issued in accordance with the following resolution adopted at the last meeting: "That the Publication Committee be requested to prepare from time to time, and the Board of Directors to publish and distribute in such manner and in such quantity as may be most effectual, information bearing upon the condition of the Jews in Russia."

"Within the Pale" was published in a special edition of the Society in accordance with an arrangement with the publishers of the regular edition. The other publication is "The Voice of America on Kishineff." Both were given a circulation outside of the regular membership of the Society.

The amount received for the Kishineff Fund was $5260. The amount expended for the manufacture and distribution of the books referred to was $5420.96, leaving a deficit of $160.96 against the fund.

Respectfully submitted by the Board of Directors,

EDWIN WOLF.

MEMBERSHIP

The Committee on the Part of the Report of the Board of Trustees relating to Membership presented the following:

The Committee on Membership reports that several recommendations have been made at various times. One of these was that committees should be appointed some time previous to the annual meeting, so that the subject could have some consideration, it being impossible to recommend any definite action without more time. Such being the case the undersigned recommend that the present plan of obtaining members be continued.

The report was adopted.

PUBLICATIONS

The Committee on the Part of the Report of the Board of Trustees relating to Publications presented the following:

In the opinion of the Committee the most important publication of the year was the Book of Psalms, transcending the temporary importance of the books on Kishineff and marking the beginning of the issue of the Bible. The translation is excellent, and the form of the publication adds greatly to the convenience and usefulness of the book.

The books on Kishineff are useful as historical documents, reporting the opinions of many men as well as the facts on which those opinions were based, concerning one of the most important events in recent Jewish history. This is their value to the historian. They have another and equally important purpose in informing public opinion and the public conscience of the world about the status of the Jew in Russia.

Although the Committee has not seen "In Assyrian Tents," it nevertheless assumes the risk of cheerfully approving this publication, first because it has confidence in the judgment of the Publication Committee, and second, because it strongly favors the issue of juvenile publications.

As to the future, the Committee expresses the hope that the publication of the Bible will be proceeded with, without delay, so that the Jewish public as well as the world at large may soon have a true and unprejudiced translation of that most important of all books.

In view of the valuable work done during the past sixteen years by the late Dr. M. Jastrow and the late Simon A. Stern the Committee recommends that a memoir expressive of the sense of obligation under which this Society rests toward these lamented valuable co-workers be published in the forth-coming Year Book.

The report was adopted.

BRANCHES

The Chairman of the New York Committee, Mr. Cyrus L. Sulzberger, reported on the work of organizing the New York Branch.

On motion, the Chairman of the meeting, Dr. Hollander, was authorized to organize a local committee in Baltimore.

The Philadelphia members of the Board of Trustees were authorized to organize an Auxiliary Society on membership.

STATISTICS

Mr. Philip Cowen, of New York City, presented the following resolution:

Resolved, that a committee of three be appointed by the President to co-operate with any other committees appointed or to be appointed for the same purpose by other organizations to gather statistics of the Jews in America, and that the Board of Trustees be authorized to make such appropriation towards the cost thereof as the funds of the Society may justify.

On motion, the resolution was referred to the Board of Trustees.

The resolution in memory of Simon A. Stern adopted by the Board of Trustees in the morning was read.

Mr. Philip Cowen moved that the Board of Trustees be requested to appoint, a fortnight before each annual meeting, hereafter, a committee to whom shall be submitted such parts of the forthcoming annual report as it is deemed proper to submit for the special consideration of members at such annual meeting, and their report shall be presented thereat.

Adopted.

The meeting on motion adjourned.

In the evening, at a banquet, Mr. Morris Newburger was presented with a set of the Society's publications bound in red morocco leather which were issued during the time when he was president, as a testimonial in appreciation of his services.

CHARLES S. BERNHEIMER, Secretary.

[In pursuance of the recommendation made by the Committee on the Part of the Report of the Board of Trustees relating to Publications, and adopted by The Jewish Publication Society of America at the above meeting (p. 398), the Publication Committee offers the following tributes to the memory of Marcus Jastrow and Simon Adler Stern, members of its body from the origin of the Society until the day of their death.]

MARCUS JASTROW

In the foregoing report of the sixteenth year of the Jewish Publication Society of America a triumphant note rings through the thrice-repeated announcement: The past year saw the publication of the Psalms, the first of the books of the Bible translated under the auspices of the Society. Why exult over the completion of a miniature volume, over a version that varies from other versions mainly in here a word, there a turn of the phrase, a heightened accent, the mechanical arrangement of the strophe, a particle making closer or less close the syntactical connection of sentences? strong-box of the Society lies locked up a mass of manuscripts and a mass of correspondence. They answer the question. The slender volume, its elegant simplicity, its minute scholarship, its detailed completeness, represent the care and thought of years; the care and ability of an enthusiastic translator; the care and acumen of revisers, sub-revisers, and superrevisers; the care, ability, and acumen of an untiring, conscientious editor. All the way through the mass, and all the way through another and bulkier mass lying beside it, but not yet vivified by the printer's art, notes upon notes, now in black ink, now in red, run in and out on the margins, at the bottom, on the top, between the lines. The curiously closecramped yet distinct hand, jagged yet in a way regular, fashions here a query, there a suggestion, now it tentatively puts an amendment, finally it gathers up the argument and points the way to a decision. The handwriting is Marcus Jastrow's, the notes are his visible legacy to the Jewish Publication Society of America.

All men can follow up these evidences of devotion. Only his associates know how much ampler the legacy than the crowded notes betoken.

The Psalms had been put into type. All the editors and sub-editors and style revisers and members of committees had submitted their comments and suggestions. These had been collated, digested, and applied. Again and again the Hebrew and the English had been compared with each other, verse by verse, word by word, letter by letter, sign by sign. The final proof lay before the chief editor. A doubt—is this expression correct? Instantly the frail man was up and out of the armchair by the desk and across the room with a short, energetic step. He lifted the package of papers out of the iron safe, traced the development of the expression from copy to copy of the manuscript, and satisfied himself that he was presenting the views of the translator and his advisers. Back to his desk, only to repeat the process twice and three times on every page, for the sake of a word, for a comma, for the indentation of a line. At last he uttered the "imprimatur." Before the order could be executed, the soul that had put so much of itself into the work fled the hindering body. The editor was not permitted to see the product of ten years' labor.

On June 5, 1892, at a general meeting of the Society, the formidable project of a new English Bible translation was publicly framed. In December, 1903, the first booklet was finished. Who cares to count the meetings of committees in the interval, the consultations had between revisers and translators, the letters and reports written! And with all of them, since they concerned the Bible Translation, Marcus Jastrow was identified. This is his invisible legacy to the Jewish Publication Society of America.

Not yet has the whole magnitude of the heritage been set down. When Doctor Jastrow first undertook the chief editorship of the Bible, there was a tacit agreement among his associates of the Publication Committee to spare him other duties of the position. The Chairman of the Committee did, indeed, refrain for a while from assigning manuscripts to him for examination and report. But a Hebrew book was suggested for translation, a Talmudic study submitted, a liturgical essay received, a tale of Eastern Jewish life written, a history of the Jews, of Jewish literature was under consideration, and the sub-committee of readers needed his aid imperatively this one time yet. Laughing and shrugging his shoulders, he stretched out his hand for the manuscript and tucked it under his arm. At the next Committee meeting, without fail, there was a report, carefully elaborated in writing, treating of the subject matter and the style of the book, as well as of the practical question of its relation to the Society and to the needs of the members of the Society.

There is still more. Who does not remember the voice all but quenched in tears with which Marcus Jastrow pleaded for the Kishineff victims, and urged the Society to accept the proposition for the publication of campaign literature that should look to the amelioration of Russian-Jewish conditions? Was there any biennial or annual meeting of the Society at which his statuesque face was not seen to light up with a humorous or a trenchant thought, at which his voice did not give utterance to a wise or a stimulating thought? Was he not one of those who fought the battle for the History of Graetz when its publication was antagonized in open meeting? Nor was he less ready to espouse the cause of the book when to bring it out required his reading of the proof and a toilsome comparison between the translation and the original.

Once, indeed, he rendered the Society a doubtful service. It was at a meeting of the Publication Committee in the very early days—he was identified with the Society and the Committee from the beginning. The first book was about to The type had been selected, the format determined, the order for the paper given, the legend on the side and back arranged. There remained only the momentous question of the color of the binding-cloth, momentous because the decision might affect all future publications. The Committee was divided into the partisans of the sombre and the partisans of the gay. Doctor Jastrow was sitting apart, and, weary of the arguments of the two sides, he engaged his nearest associate in conversation. Still the discussion on colors raged hot. "Whether red or blue, we want our books to be read." he suddenly ejaculated. The great question was decided amid laughter-how, all the patrons of the Society know.

Such disinterested sacrifice of time and working powers would suffice to justify the subvention the Society awarded "A Dictionary of the Targumim, the Talmud Babli and Yerushalmi, and the Midrashic Literature," even if the Dictionary were not a monument of Jewish scholarship. As it is, the Society did but honor itself in causing its name to be connected with Doctor Jastrow's magnum opus, to which he gave over twenty-five years of his life, and from which he diverted his exclusive attention only when the Bible Translation made its appeal, which he regarded as all but paramount. Often in the later days when he was saddened by the death of friend after friend, he addressed to the sympathizers who were left the question, pathetic in its futility and in his insistent demand for an answer: "Do you think I shall be spared to finish my Dictionary?" Happily he was spared. A few hours before he was stricken while at work at his desk with the illness that resulted fatally five days later, he examined the last sheet of the Dictionary, containing its preface and its index.

To write a memoir of a man like Marcus Jastrow is a task worthy of distinguished ability, and we could not hope to do it justice. To our readers we may seem to have fallen far below adequacy if only by reason of dwelling, to the exclusion of all else, upon the period of scholarly retirement, the last ten or twelve years of a beautifully rounded life of seventy-four, each adult year of which was fraught with achievements for Jews and for Judaism. The space allotted us permits only a small canvas. Forced to limit ourselves, we chose his work for the Jewish Publication Society, which, when the whole picture was unrolled before the mind's eye, appeared, indeed, an epitome of his life, mind, and character.

The devotion he displayed in behalf of his Dictionary repeats itself in the Bible work, and with it go the scholarship and the love of accuracy amounting to a passion that characterize all his productions, from his "Vier Jahrhunderte aus der Geschichte der Juden" down to his editorial work for the Talmudic Department of the Jewish Encyclopedia, and his many scientific papers, popular lectures, and timely newspaper articles. The literary ability which, on its constructive side, was evinced in that vivid picture of his prison life at Warsaw, "Bär Meisels, Oberrabiner zu Warschau," reappears on its critical side in his painstaking and luminous reports on the manuscripts submitted to him. His public spirit, growing out of love for his people and out of love for truth no matter what the class of society affected, is revealed by the aid he gave to the minutely laborious and little appreciated task of building up a Jewish literature in the English language, no less than by his contest with Jewish obscurantism and his struggle against Russian degradation of Jews in Poland; or by his communal activity in Philadelphia in behalf of charitable institutions; or by the services he rendered the Russian Jewish immigrants; or his fervent espousal of Zionism; or his eager interest in American politics and national affairs. In the religious school of Michael Sachs's congregation in Berlin, on the lecture platform of Maimonides College, when superintending the religious school of Rodeph Shalom Congregation, as guide of the Jewish Culture Association, and at the Summer Assemblies of the Jewish Chautauqua, he was not more a teacher than in the committee room of the Publication Society. Only of him as a controversialist the last period of his life furnishes no typical picture. Not that he had grown less fearless or less enthusiastic or less capable of just indignation than in the days when he combated conferences and movements tending in his opinion to erroneous ends. The conservatism, the moderation, the philosophic regularity of living, which were so basic in his nature that they literally counteracted the ravages of disease, at the last triumphed wholly. They acted as solvents in which the acerbities of the hotspur period and the aristocratic aloofness of his middle age were mellowed into complete geniality.

In contrasting the present stage of Jewish development in America with earlier stages, the historical critic is in the habit of dwelling upon the lack of organizing ability among the rabbis of the past generation. The rabbis, it is said, were extreme individualists, the most Jewish of Jews in their revolt against organization. Marcus Jastrow, a rabbi of the old school, filled with the ideals, the traditions, and the inspiration of an earlier age, was yet modern to the core. Whether the question was the formation of a Board of Delegates of Civil and Religious Rights of the Jews of the United States, or the support of an Association of Jewish Ministers, or the founding of a Jewish Alliance, or propaganda for the Alliance Israélite Universelle, he stood for concerted action. and his activities for the welfare of this, the third Jewish Publication Society in America, are a striking instance of his faith in harmonious union. Like his efforts for the establishment of the second of the three American Jewish Publication Societies, they demonstrate not only that he favored and promoted organization, but also that, in spite of strong individuality and rare attainments, he was able and willing to practice the most rigid self-denial for the general good and subordinate himself to the accomplished organization.

And, finally, who will venture to question that this symmetrical personality was the result of the unified, single-minded training as rabbi which, in Warsaw, Mannheim, Worms and Philadelphia, or wherever his word was heard, made Marcus Jastrow a power as a religious leader?

So true is it that every act is the expression of the whole man, and with Marcus Jastrow every act was the whole noble man.

SIMON ADLER STERN

A string is broken, and the instrument
Whose harmonies throughout the bounteous days
Beckoned our hearts along serener ways,
Lies tuneless, without passion or lament.—
And unto those to whom its sentiment
Changed life's dull duties into hymns of praise
A note is stilled, e'en as they stand at gaze
In vain expectance of a cadence spent.

Yet not in vain shall this expectance prove;
For in our souls these melodies we hold
In ever dearer, unforgetting love,
Veining the coming years with fairest gold:
The sweet remembrance of a nobleness
That dwelt among us to uplift and bless.

FELIX N. GERSON.

In the death of Simon Adler Stern not only the Jewish community of Philadelphia but the world at large mourns the loss of a man whose life and attainments reflected the best and noblest qualities of the American Jew. He was beloved and esteemed by the foremost citizens of his community as well as by all whose good fortune it was to know him.

In Simon Stern the man stood higher than his works. In his personality there was a charm and gentleness that distinguished him as a man of culture and native refinement. He showed himself possessed of marked capacity as a writer and translator. He was recognized as a skilled musician and critic. Had he made literature or music his life work, the rank he would have gained in these arts would have been high and lasting. Even though he pursued these as avocations, he stood as the foremost authority among the Jews of America on literature and music. In him, however, art was not an end in itself, but a means towards producing the finished man of culture. It was this that won him his host of friends among all classes; it was this that made his life of special importance in a materialistic age.

He was born in Philadelphia on the 8th day of December, 1838, the oldest of nine children, five sons and three daughters having been born after him. His father was Julius Stern, a native of Germany. The elder Stern took, in his days, a hearty interest in Jewish affairs. He was one of the founders and the first president of the Keneseth Israel Congregation. Of his oldest son's musical talents he was particularly proud, and he gladly afforded him the opportunity to develop them. On one occasion he, with his son, was attending an entertainment at which it had been announced a juvenile violinist would astonish the audience by his musical ability. After listening to the performance, Mr. Stern declared that his son was able to play better. The remark was overheard, and the youthful Simon brought before the audience and a violin placed in his hands. His performance won the plaudits of the assembly.

When he had attained the requisite age, young Stern was sent to the public schools. In these he made such rapid progress that at the age of eleven he had passed through the grammar grades and was ready for admission to the high school. His youth, however, disqualified him for promotion. Perhaps this was fortunate, for the next two and a half years were devoted to music, German, and French—studies to which his talents were specially adapted, and which tended toward their early development. In 1853 he was admitted to the high school, where he remained two years.

His musical studies began with his eighth year. The instrument on which he performed, the violin, is the most efficient for the development of the true musician. Heine's statement of this truth, as rendered into English by Mr. Stern, is one of the most striking that has ever been made. He says:

The virtuosity of the violinist, unlike that of the pianist, is not merely the result of digital dexterity and technical proficiency. The violin is an instrument with almost human moods, and is sympathetic accord with the feelings of the performer. The slightest annoyance, the gentlest emotion, the merest breath of feeling, is immediately re-echoed by it, and perhaps this arises from the fact that the violin is pressed so close to the heart that it hears its every throb. But this only applies to artists who have a heart. The cold and soulless violinist is always the same, and is able at any moment to reckon upon the implicit obedience of his fiddle. But this much-bepraised certainty of execution results from limited mental resources; for the greatest masters were those whose playing was not infrequently affected by disturbing influences from without or within.

Stern's first music teacher was Adolph Scherzer, and he afterward studied under Ahrens, Waldteufel, and Hauser. Even as a boy his proficiency on the violin attracted attention, and although never engaged in any professional entertainments, he was frequently called upon to display his talents.

He was in his seventeenth year when, in 1855, he left the high school and entered the millinery store of his father. After a few years he, together with his brother, David Stern, opened a millinery store under the firm name of S. A. & D. Stern. In this business he continued until 1871. He then associated himself with his brothers, Edward and Harry, in the printing and publishing business, the house being known as Edward Stern & Co. In this business, which has since assumed large dimensions, he remained for over eighteen years. The firm printed a number of books, magazines, and journals, and gained a wide reputation for the excellent typographical appearance of their work.

In 1887 the Finance Company of Pennsylvania was chartered, and Mr. Stern was selected as its treasurer. For fifteen years a large part of Mr. Stern's time and labor was devoted to the furtherance of its interests. About two years before his death, failing health compelled him to relinquish the work.

Although Mr. Stern's career as banker, printer, and merchant had been honorable, it was not due to these that he gained the distinction which he enjoyed.

His early taste for music, developed under good instructors, increased rather than grew less with advancing years. The youthful violinist became the devoted musician by whom the science as well as the art of music was studied, and in whom mind and ear and hand were in harmonious unison. Although never performing professionally, and very seldom in public, he was regarded as the best amateur violinist in Philadelphia. His skill with the violin and his love and knowledge of music brought him into close contact with some of the leading musicians in the country. Michael Cross's house was a centre for distinguished musicians, and there, at regular intervals, Mr. Stern met with Hennig and Schmitz, Jarvis and others equally devoted and equally distinguished in musical circles. Among his friends were Theodore Thomas and Carl Wolfson. Mr. Stern was one of the leading promoters of the Philadelphia Music Festival Association, of which he was likewise a director. also a director and treasurer of the Beethoven Society.

With Mr. Stern music was not a barren study; it did not result merely in "digital dexterity and technical proficiency," but ripened into a sound musical judgment that made him rank high among musical critics. His contributions on this subject were at one time somewhat copious. His first opportunity to express his critical ability came through the newspapers. He became the Philadelphia correspondent of Dwight's Musical Journal, of Boston. He contributed criticisms frequently to the North American, the Evening Bulletin, and other newspapers, by which his work was favorably regarded and accepted as accurate and correct. Not only in newspapers, however, but in such periodicals as the Penn Monthly his articles on musical subjects were welcomed and read with interest and pleasure.

Mr. Stern's musical criticisms naturally led him into the field of literature. He had from his childhood been devoted to his books—not, perhaps, with the close study and application of the specialist student, nor with the careless superficiality of the mere dilettante, but with the devotion and nice judgment of a lover of literature, and one whose delights are found in its pursuit. Not only was he familiar with the best works in English literature, but the French and German tongues yielded their best fruits to his grasp. In all three of these languages he had a ready and choice vocabulary, and his ability to converse with ease in any of them was of much service to him.

In 1873 his first permanent work of importance was published. It is a peculiar fact that the two authors whose works Mr. Stern translated from the German were Jews, both men of artistic temperament, and both among the foremost in German literature. "Do Boerne and Heine belong to Jewish history?" asks the historian Graetz. "Unquestionably," is his answer. It was the latter—Heine, the brilliant, yet unfortunate, genius—that Mr. Stern undertook to interpret in English. The book was entitled "Scintillations from the Prose Works of Heinrich Heine," and was one of the "Leisure Hour Series" published by Henry Holt & Co. Charles Godfrey Leland had translated Heine's poetry into English, but the prose works which Mr. Stern Englished had never before been translated. The book was introduced by a chapter on Heine himself. In this Mr. Stern gave a brief but clear account of the poet's life.

Though he was not blind to Heine's faults, he was still the devoted admirer of his great qualities. As he himself said, "Heine's faults were, unfortunately, as patent as his virtues; but his genius was greater than either;" and although he condemned those who feel it their duty to apologize for Heine's frailties and explain them away, he nevertheless asserted that "an enlightened critic feels forced to admit that in judging of the character and motives of a great genius, that genius must, to a certain extent, furnish the tests by which he is to be criticised.

The book itself consisted of two parts. The first was a translation of almost the whole of the "Florentine Nights," a series of love tales told to a dying woman, in Heine's most peculiar humor. The balance of the book consisted of excerpts from Heine's works, in part personal and autobiographical, but mainly presenting his views on "Men, Manners, and Society," on "France and the French," on "Woman, Love, and Matrimony," on "Art, Literature, Criticism," on "Religion, Philosophy," etc., on "Death and Immortality," and miscellaneous. The excerpts are so aptly chosen that they give a rapid but very accurate insight into Heine's genius and philosophy.

The book, which has been out of print for some years past, was a charming one throughout. Of Mr. Stern's translation it need only be said that it reads with the grace and force of an original work in the English language. To those unacquainted with the difficulties that confront the translator, and of the great variety in the quality of translations that exist, this may seem to have been an easy task. To have done it with the skill and care which Mr. Stern devoted to it, and which resulted in this finished production, required not only knowledge and understanding, but patient and continued application.

The second German-Jewish author whose works Mr. Stern translated into English was Berthold Auerbach, whose novels, depicting life not only among the great and noble, but more particularly among the lowly and obscure, are such graphic and faithful portraits of German life that they roused in the German public an unsurpassed degree of interest. The first work of Auerbach which Mr. Stern translated was "Waldfried," in 1873, and is not very widely known. It was translated in accordance with an agreement with Henry Holt & Co., the publishers of his "Scintillations." The best evidence of the faithful and satisfactory manner in which this work was done is that it was at Auerbach's own suggestion that Mr. Stern was selected to translate one of the best known of his books, entitled "Auf der Höhe." Stern's translation was published in 1875, by the Holts, and entitled, "On the Heights. A Novel. By Berthold Auerbach. Translated by Simon Adler Stern." In this long novel Mr. Stern displayed the same care as in previous works.

Among Mr. Stern's warm friends was Mr. Wharton Barker, the banker, and it was as the immediate personal representative of the latter that he went to China. Here he superintended with ability the important business with which he was charged. One of the results of his travels was the publication of the "Jottings of Travel in China and Japan" (1888), dedicated to Wharton Barker. The book is largely made up of letters written to his relatives and friends at home, and was published by the author at their earnest solicitation.

He left on the 9th of April, 1887, and returned on the 4th of September, after having visited a number of places in China and Japan. Several gentlemen accompanied him. Mr. Stern brought home with him numerous valuable and interesting Japanese and Chinese articles, but nothing so valuable and interesting as the memories of the scenes and adventures of his journey as they are presented in his "Jottings."

This book is not a learned dissertation upon the habits, the customs, the occupations, the religions of these distant peoples; or an elaborate description of the climate, topography, the products, the finances, the exports and imports, the government and castes of these far-off lands, but it is simply the impressions made upon the writer in his travels through these distant and interesting portions of the globe. Throughout the whole book the personality of the author is gently manifest. He did not undertake to tell everything that can be seen, nor even all that he himself saw. It is on subjects that are most real to himself, in which he takes a personal interest, that one can write most interestingly, and it was to these things alone that Mr. Stern addressed himself in this compilation of letters which he sent to his friends. brightly described the varied scenes spread out before him on his journey, the character and customs of the people whom he visited, and devoted a chapter to the great problems of intercommunication and finance in the Chinese Empire, with which his visit was intimately connected.

In addition to these literary labors Mr. Stern had been a contributor to a number of magazines on a variety of topics connected with literature and art. Foremost among these periodicals was the Penn Monthly, of which Mr. Stern was for several years the managing editor. The American, the successor of the Penn Monthly, also received his contributions, and he was for a time connected with the management of its publication. Some of the descriptions of countries in the catalogue of the Centennial Exhibition of 1876 were written by him, and he was also connected with its art department. He was the editor of the Industrial Review, a position which he occupied for many years.

While exercising a decided influence in the Jewish community, he never took a leading part in its communal affairs. In 1880 he was elected secretary of the Jewish Hospital Association, in which position he served continuously until the time of his death.

On the organization of the Publication Committee of the Jewish Publication Society of America, Mr. Stern was chosen a member, and his critical discernment and literary skill proved of great service in this place.

In the general community of Philadelphia Mr. Stern was well known and very popular. He was a member of the Historical Society of Pennsylvania and of the Union League. One of the founders and for a number of years a director of the Penn Club, he resigned his directorship when he went to China, though he remained a member. He was also a member of the Journalists' and Mercantile Clubs, and was on the Publication Committee of the Civil Service Reform Association. He also formed one of the "Triplets," an organization of well-known men who meet together every month at the Penn Club house.

All these varied activities ceased when death claimed him, May 2, 1904, but the influence he exerted through them and through his genial personality upon the Jewish community of Philadelphia and the larger community outside will remain a monument to his memory for all time.

1DYLS OF THE GASS.—By Martha Wolfenstein. 295 pp. $1.25.

"Charming is, indeed, the word which one keeps repeating to oneself throughout. . . . . It is not a novel, nor is it a set of short stories, but a blend of both eked out even, a la Thackeray, with snatches of essays, in which the writer wears her heart upon her leaves. It is a whimsical, wayward, womanly book, saturated with the charm of the Ghetto life which Miss Wolfenstein loves best in the world."—I. Zangwill, Jewish Chronicle, London.

No reader who is not blinded by prejudice will rise from the perusal of this engrossing volume without an enhanced sense of compas ion for, and admiration of, the singular race of whose traits and emperament Mr. Zangwill is perhaps the most gifted interpreter."—Spectator, London.

LOST PRINCE ALMON.—By Louis Pendleton. Illustrated. 218 pp. 75 cents.

"It is a charmingly written story of the little Prince Jehoash, son of Ahaziah, whom the Prince Jehoiada had rescued from the clutches of Athaliah. Our Sunday-school literature is so extremely poor that we hail this volume with particular delight, and we predict that it will soon be one of the most popular gift books for Jewish children."—Jewish Voice.

CHILDREN OF THE GHETTO.—By I. ZANGWILL. 2 vols. 451 pp., 325 pp. $2.50. Sold to Members only.

"Nowhere else have been given us more realistic pictures of the shabbiness, the unwholesomeness, the close-packed human misery, the squalor, the vulgarity, the sharp struggle in the mean competition of life in the East End of London. . . . [But] there is a world of poetry, of dreams, of imagination, of high calling, of intellectual subtlety, even, in which sordid London, not Jewish, has no part or lot."—Charles Dudley Warner, Harper's Magazine.
